

Blood Donors Registering

Mt. Angel Business Men Ask Populace to Give for Plasma

MT. ANGEL — Peter F. Gores announced to the Business Men's club, assembled for its regular meeting at the Mt. Angel hotel Tuesday noon, that the mobile blood unit would be in Mt. Angel to take its next 160 pints of blood June 30. The committee wishes to sign up 180 donors to make sure that, discounting absences and unsuitability, there would still be sufficient people reporting to supply the needed 160 pints.

Donors may register at one of five places: Victor Frey's, Fisher's Drug store, Marion County Farmers Union Oil, Farmers Union warehouse, Mt. Angel Creamery, Mt. Angel flax plant, and A. G. Traeger's shop. Any person finding it possible to come only at a certain time, should state that time when he files his registration and it will be allotted him if possible to, and if not, he will be taken at least within 15 minutes of the time mentioned.

Jim Fournier gave a brief report on what is expected of Mt. Angel in the Fifth War Loan. As previously announced, the quota is $125,000. The aim of the community is to purchase sufficient bonds to buy a convalescent hospital, X-ray equipment and the necessary drugs. The cost would amount to $126,000. The aim is high and the season, figuring financially, not so good, but a sincere effort will be made to reach the top.

John Bauman suggested the purchase of tax notes. These are a form of war bond and may be cashed in after two months to pay income tax. Especially the business houses and the farmers, he said, should be informed on the subject.

E. B. Stolle, who was in charge of the D day activities reported that the bells had been rung and the sirens blown and the people assembled for an hour of prayer at 1:30 a. m., Father Hildebrand leading the prayers.

Otto Oswald, sick committee chairman, stated that Dr. Schierbaum was doing fairly well, welcomed company and was especially pleased with any news of the activities of the Business Men's club.

It was voted to send a letter of appreciation to Arthur Holmes, who recently moved to Salem, for his fine work for the club and the flax celebration.

Visitors introduced at the luncheon were Don Brazie of the Brown-Jaklin Co. of Portland, and H. F. Witt of Mt. Angel.

A letter from the Salem chamber of commerce regarding membership in the national association was acted upon by a prompt decision to renew the membership.

Letters from the University of Oregon about postwar planning and one from the Southwest Airways were referred to the industry committees.

Rich River Bottoms Yield Vegetables

Grand Island, Unionvale, Fairview Harvest Peas

GRAND ISLAND — Harvest of the sweet green peas produced in abundance on river bottom land and marketed largely through the processing plants is top column news on the Willamette valley vegetable front today.

Here on the "Island", the big task was started Sunday forenoon. Local viner machinery is running at capacity, with aid of Mexican laborers.

Pickup ballers are operating in local alfalfa fields full speed to get hay cared for before June showers damage the crop that is reported in first class condition.

Blue Lake bean training is now in progress here and a great deal of the work is being done by boys and girls. Working by the ball of twine rather than by hourly scale they are earning good wages.

UNIONVALE — Pea harvest for field growers in this area under contract with the Woodburn processing plant started at the viner in the Unionvale district Friday when trial runs were made. Mexican labor is aiding at the electrically driven vining machines.

The crop is reported good. Starting Monday, a night shift was being worked at the processing plant, according to Charles Byers of Woodburn, the overseer. Long lines of loaded trucks wait daily to unload in turn.

FAIRVIEW — Six acres of early peas on the W. J. Marley farm, contracted for by the Woodburn processing plant, are being harvested.

Lack of efficient help slows the work, but every man is putting in many hours in an effort to run through every grower's crop as fast as the Unionvale viner machines will function.

One truck driver left the Marley farm at 8 p.m. Monday with a large cargo and it was after 3 a. m. Tuesday when he was able to get it unloaded and return home to rest a few hours. He started hauling again at 7 a.m.

Many of the harvesters have dairy herds to care for in addition to working in the pea fields.

Grain Good; Gardens Dry

MIDDLE GROVE — Gardens and onion seed crops are badly in need of rain, but grain, especially wheat, and hay crops look exceptionally good.

Haying has begun on a small scale in spite of unfavorable weather for curing.

Strawberries will probably be finished next week. The crop in the Hammer patch is reported as better than last year.
