C. D. Fletchers Will Manage Elderly Home

Announcing the appointment of Rev. and Mrs. C. D. Fletcher as resident managers of the Methodist Old People's home here, the board of the home Saturday revealed that population there is largest in the history of the establishment.

Fifty - two old persons are "guests" in the non-charitable home, which has a long waiting list and which until the coming of the Fletchers had operated under only two managers since occupying the big brick structure at 1625 Center street.

Mrs. Nellie P. Gilman was first of these, serving from 1919 to about 1936. Since that time Mrs. Benjamin Blatchford had been matron-manager until mid-June of this year.

Mr. Fletcher was in the Methodist ministry for 40 years in the Idaho conference. Mrs. Fletcher came to Salem with a group of ready-made friends, women who had known her as home base secretary of the Columbia River branch of the Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist church.

War Workers Will Purchase Flying Fort

PASCO, July 8 (AP) — Workers on the Hanford government construction project near here have launched a drive to buy a B-17 Flying Fortress bomber for the army air forces, not with war bonds but as an outright gift.

The campaign which will be climaxed with the gift bomber being flown to the project on July 16 and there christened by the workers and presented to the air forces.

The unusual idea of giving a bomber outright originated with a carpenter crew on the project, but Max K. Blanchard, a carpenter from Chillicothe, Mo., is given credit by his fellow-workers for thinking of it first. Letters from his son, Lieut. Charles Blanchard, navy flier, prompted the idea, Blanchard says.

In a speech signaling the beginning of the drive, Blanchard asked fellow-workers to give at least a day's pay for the plane.

Washington Residents Show Little Concern Over Primary

By The Associated Press
Campaign managers of both parties issued "get out the vote" appeals to their workers yesterday in the face of apparent lack of concern on the part of Washington's 800,000 registered voters toward the state's first mid-summer primary next Tuesday.

Democratic and republican candidates will be nominated for 16 national and state offices, for state legislative and county posts, but in only three counties—governor, senator and first district congress—has there been evident general interest.

Secretary of State Belle Reeves estimated approximately 500,000 would vote, if the normal percentage of registered voters exercise their franchise. But some campaigners expressed concern whether the electorate, accustomed to September primaries, would turn out readily for the July 11 balloting. The date was moved up to give time for dispatch and return of service men's ballots, of which some 15,000 have been distributed.

Some of the warmest exchanges have occurred in the republican gubernatorial race, in which Gov. Arthur B. Langlie, Louis Wasmer of Spokane, Marius Rasmussen of Clallum Bay and Charles A. DeBolt of Kennewick seek the nomination. Langlie, in a statewide broadcast, charged that "special interest" seekers had spent "huge sums" in an effort to defeat him. Wasmer, a radio station owner, replied that "special interest people" were sponsoring the governor in his campaign. DeBolt and Rasmussen have not campaigned extensively.

In the first congressional district, composed of King and Kitsap counties, 10 republicans and eight democrats are engaged in a free-

Farmers Get Wage Board

PORTLAND, July 8 (AP) — A seven-man board to handle agricultural wages in Oregon was set up today by the war food administration (WFA).

The group will set ceilings on farm labor upon the request of the majority of growers within a community. Farm wage ceilings are now in force only in Malheur county's pea harvest; but the WFA predicted that both hop and bean picking might come under the ceiling program.

The board is headed by Carl Lett, assistant Portland district WFA official. Other members are Erwin L. Patterson, state director of agriculture; William E. Kimsey, state labor commissioner; Vera F. Livesey, state farm security administration director; Dr. N. I. Nielson, bureau of agricultural economics statistician; E. L. Potter, head of agricultural economics at Oregon State college; and John Shepherd, vice chairman of the state AAA committee.

Roundup Parade Leader Dies in Pendleton

PENDLETON, July 8 (AP) — The Umatilla Indian who led the Westward Ho parade each year in the Pendleton roundup died here today at the age of 68. Mitchell Lloyd, who was born on the reservation, had carried the flag in the famed parade every fall since the round-up was established.

State Waste Paper Collection Lags

PORTLAND, July 8 (AP) — Oregon's waste paper collections have slumped to the smallest point in six months, the state salvage committee announced today. The June haul was 556 tons—less than a third of the 1684-ton collection recorded in May.

USO Branch Holds Three Day Conference in Mt. Angel Hall

MT. ANGEL — "This is perhaps the most important period in the entire service of USO," said Miss Anne Sarahon Hooley, assistant executive director of the National Catholic Community Service, one of the six USO agencies, in addressing a group of 15 USO workers meeting here at St. Benedict's abbey in a three-day conference, July 5, 6 and 7.

"Rapid changes in military and war production personnel, returning servicemen and women who are doing a magnificent job of adjusting to new physical and spiritual conditions, these with the interpretation of such changes to our community, are a challenge and inspiration to all the staff," she continued as she pointed out the growing need for USO services to give families of servicemen.

Other representatives of the headquarters of the National Catholic Community Service in Washington, DC, were, Miss Mary Louise McPartin and Miss Anna M. Culkin of the training staff; Alice Smith and Miss Mary Louise Vetter of the program department; Miss Gertrude McGee of the volunteer services office; and the supervisors of region XII, J. Dermid Nallin and Miss Margaret Mealey from Seattle, Wash.

The group of 25 men and women were guests of the monastery during their three-day stay in Mt. Angel and were housed in the college building. They had requested the privilege of using the hilltop building as a meeting place.

The purpose of the meeting was to bring together the staff members of USO clubs operated by NCCS in this area in order to discuss problems due to changing trends occurring in military and war-impacted areas, and the service which the USO is offering in cooperation with the communities facing these problems. Such topics as recreation for returned and discharged servicemen, the training of junior hostesses in clubs frequented by wounded servicemen and women of the armed forces, and the community acceptance of war production families in overcrowded towns, were discussed.

Guest speakers over the three-day period included Sister Miriam Theresa, director of the school of social work, Maryhurst college; Roger Folgate, department of recreation of the federal security agency; C. W. Reynolds, USO regional executive of the northwest; Mrs. Ruth Manca, regional projects services adviser of the federal public housing authority; and Rt. Rev. Thomas Meier, OSB, abbot of St. Benedict.

The chief engineer, John Hanson of Redwood City, Calif., who was in the engine room when the hull broke said, "Rivets popped like bullets, engines and boilers toppled, steam and water filled the air—the men were barely able to climb out ahead of the flooding water."

A. J. Lilburn Dies At Roseburg Home

ROSEBURG, July 8 (AP) — A. J. Lilburn, 81, retired merchant of Roseburg and Portland, died at his home here today.

A native of Kentucky and a resident of Kansas and Illinois before moving to Portland in 1897, Lilburn came to Roseburg in 1913. He retired 20 years ago, but for two years preceding his death he had been constable of the Deer Creek district. His widow, a daughter, Mrs. Lee Wells, Roseburg, and a son, Frank L. Lilburn, of Salem, survive.

Funeral services will be held at Roseburg at 10:30 a. m. Monday. Burial will be at Salem.
