

GI Benefit Bill Adds Problem To State Unit

Unemployment benefits provided under the GI bill of rights action taken by congress posed additional problems for the state unemployment commission today.

With supplementary federal benefits to returning service men and women available in September, state agencies already are considering the bill's provisions with a view to being prepared to handle the unemployment load.

Under existing state laws most veterans are entitled either to definite benefit amounts after returning to civilian life or have wage credits frozen from pre-war earnings. Oregon's law comes under the latter classification, requiring the use of workers' earnings back as far as 1938, and creating a considerable problem for storage space.

The bill provides for a veterans placement board, consisting of the administrator of veterans' affairs, director of selective service system and administrator of the federal security agency. The veterans administrator, as chairman, is responsible for making mutual agreements with state or federal agencies, to take the process claims and to pay unemployment allowances.

Jobs Still Plentiful State benefits must be deducted from the $20 a week for 52 weeks allowed to most veterans. While eligibility rights under the state and federal laws will be somewhat similar, separate determinations will be mandatory because of differences with regard to self employment, disqualifications and benefit periods.

Because jobs still are plentiful, few of the thousands of service men already discharged have filed claims for benefits under Oregon's laws.

Looking up frozen wage credits, however, takes considerable time. If a few thousand such claims suddenly should develop here, the entire claims-determination machinery of the unemployment compensation commission might become clogged.

Benefits Increase Unemployment benefits in June, despite a slight increase over May, continued at a lower level than last months a year ago. An average of about 200 claimants a week drew $11,172, bringing the year's total to $103,717.

Salem took the lead in initial claims with 39 but Astoria was far ahead in continued claims with 520.

Trouble Closes Bomber Plant

DETROIT, July 15 - (P) - The Ford-operated Willow Run bomber plant near Ypsilanti was closed by management tonight for the second time today, a Ford spokesman said, because "crane operators worked sporadically and held meetings in the plant."

The workers reported to their jobs for the night shift after the giant plant, which produces four-engine B-24 Liberator bombers, had been shut down for five hours during the day because of a work suspension by crane operators and their floor helpers. The spokesman said little work was done, however, and absenteeism was very high.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, July 15 - (Special) - Attending summer school at the University of Oregon this year is Mrs. Ida Nestell, Salem, mother of six children, four of whom are alumni of the university. Mrs. Nestell waited until her children were grown before she fulfilled her lifelong ambition of studying art. She first attended the university in the summer of 1941 and in 1938 took art lessons at the Salem Art Center.

Since that time she has had oil paintings exhibited twice in the Oregon Art show in Portland, and this spring her oil painting, "Autumn Leaves", which she sketched up the McKenzie river was one of the paintings sold at the show.

First Class Graduates at State Hospital

First class of cadet and student nurses to complete the first psychiatric training course for their profession in Oregon and their supervisor pose for The Statesman photographer on the steps of the receiving ward of the Oregon state hospital here. Left to right they are Alice Reasoner, The Dalles; Mildred Hookland, Sacred Heart hospital, Eugene; Sylvia Moe, St. Mary's hospital, Astoria; Harryette Thompson, Sacred Heart; Miss Tina Duerksen, supervisor; Dortha Rasmussen, St. Mary's; Zona Leabo, The Dalles; Beatrice Liu and Helen Martin, both Portland sanitarium.

State Hospital to Start Second Class in Psychiatric Nursing

Fourteen young women students who Monday commence a three months' term of training in psychiatric nursing at Oregon state hospital, will find the foundations of their new specialized school well laid, believes Dr. John Evans, hospital superintendent.

A class of eight from hospital training courses over the state this past week completed the course and became the first nurses' class ever to graduate in psychiatry in Oregon.

Alice Reasoner and Zona Leabo, who this week return to The Dalles hospital are senior cadet nurses, while Harryette Thompson and Mildred Hookland, from Sacred Heart hospital at Eugene, are junior cadets, Helen Martin and Beatrice Liu, who are training at Portland sanitarium and Dortha Rasmussen and Sylvia Moe, at St. Mary's hospital, Astoria, complete the first class.

Tina Duerksen, who for six years was at Henningsen sanitarium in Topeka, Kas., where she was a supervisor in the post graduate course in psychiatric nursing, was in charge of this first class. She will remain at Oregon state hospital, Dr. Evans has announced, with the title of director of education.

During their stay at the hospital here the nurses in training engaged in the usual hospital activities but specialized in caring for mental cases. Both Dr. Evans and Miss Duerksen are lavish in their praise of the experiment which they declare has proved a success.

Establishment of the psychiatric training course for these cadet and student nurses (cadet nurses are students, but are enlisted in the service of the military should they be called to duty following graduation and are training under direct supervision of the military) received the approval of the board of control at the request of Dr. Evans. The nurses are housed in one of the hospital cottages not far from the main institution and receive small compensation in addition to their meals, lodging and some other necessities.

"I consider psychiatric nursing an almost unlimited field," Dr. Evans declared last week in discussing the hospital's entry into the educational circle. "The time is not far off when these nurses will be in great demand by mental institutions."

In addition to having an opportunity to deal with mental cases, cadet and student nurses were invaluable aids at the hospital during the current shortage of manpower and particularly of trained nurses, Dr. Evans said.

Most of the nurses in the initial class are in their early 20s, characterized in common by engaging personalities, good sense of humor and an interest in understanding their patients' problems, those who worked with them declared. Part of them later may take specialized training in tuberculosis hospitals or in institutions specializing in treatment of children's diseases, or other advanced work.

Members of the class themselves expressed keen appreciation for the opportunity of receiving psychiatric training in the state's largest mental hospital following basic training in general hospitals.

All spoke of the kindly treatment accorded them by Dr. Evans and other hospital employees.

They completed their work by arranging a baseball game for patients in their care. A picnic Wednesday noon was as near as they came to class day or formal commencement celebration.

Glib Tongue Brings Nazi Surrender

By ERWIN S. HEIN
Editor of the Seabee

Distributed by the Associated Press
LONDON, July 15 - The story behind the fall of Fort Du Homet at Cherbourg discloses that a glib tongue and a stone wall enabled five Americans to capture that stronghold, including more than 300 Germans, and liberate 50 US parachute troops held prisoner.

The five are Lt. (jg) Frank Lauer, 52, Miami Beach, Fla., and Chicago; William G. Black, Chicago; Robert Garstide, Clifton, N.J., and Clifford Meadows, Murray, Utah, all Seabees, and Lt. Cmdr. Quentin R. Walsh, 32, of New London, Conn., a coast guardman.

As related to Seabee Battalion Chaplain John P. Cowan and relayed by him to the officer in charge, Cmdr. Edward H. Gesser of New Orleans, La., and Chicago, the story is this:

The Seabees and coast guardsmen were members of a reconnaissance party ahead of allied lines and were advancing under the shelter of the stone wall toward the fort.

"Lt. Lauer," it was reported, "waved a white handkerchief. The German commander waved back with another white flag, allowed him to approach the fort and demanded to know what the Americans wanted."

"Lt. Lauer, who speaks some German, said the German soldier command had surrendered. The German commander asked how many men were with Lauer. The lieutenant asserted that he had 400 men on the hidden side of the wall."

"The Germans then released the American prisoners to Lauer and surrendered the fort's outfitting and mess, more than 300 in all."

Tips to Hartford police and newspapers from newspapers in Madison, Wis., Milwaukee and Chicago that the missing man might be here led to the identification of the driver at John A. Commons, 53, university research assistant in economics, decorated World War I hero and son of Dr. John Rogers Commons, noted writer on economics.

How he disappeared was still a mystery, but both Commons and his former wife, who now lives in Washington, DC, offered illness as a possible explanation.

Dewey Confines Politics to Phone

PAWLING, N.Y., July 15 - (P) - Telephone conferences on presidential campaign plans and the meeting of republican governors at St. Louis, August 2 and 3, today marked the only injection of politics into a weekend of rest planned by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

The republican presidential nominee said he talked by telephone with two governors planning to attend the St. Louis session, which is expected to indicate the trend of the republican campaign on domestic issues. He declined, however, to identify the governors with whom he conferred.

Educators and Oregon civilian defense council officials conferred with Capt. S. W. Rawls, jr., Ninth service command, here Saturday, in connection with the army's training program as it relates to high school students.

Rawls said all senior high school students are potential inductees. He also was to contact state and local directors of vocational education while in Salem. Rawls will go from Salem to Portland.

Second Lt. Howard E. Stittsworth

Flier Gets Life At Hard Labor

MARANA FIELD, Ariz., July 15 - (P) - Second Lt. Howard E. Stittsworth, 21-year-old Luke Field flier, must spend the rest of his life imprisoned at hard labor, a court martial board ordered today in convicting him of murder for decapitation of a motorist in an automobile-airplane accident.

Pending review of his case, Stittsworth will be confined to his quarters at Luke field.

The airman appeared stunned by the verdict, which recommended dismissal from the service and convicted him on the murder charge and a charge of violation of flying regulations.

Stittsworth, whose home is in Wakefield, Kans., was identified by witnesses during a two-day trial as the pilot of a plane that dipped within six feet of the pavement on US highway 89 June 22 near Wittmann, Ariz., decapitating with a wing tip Earl W. Nepple, Los Angeles hotel man.

Director J. Edgar Hoover said in his annual report that the year was the busiest in the FBI's history. Its investigations led to 13,616 convictions—3322 more than during the same period last year. Although a major portion of the agency's work was directly connected with the war, the bureau declared there was no recess for the regular or peacetime type of offender.

WHY YOUTH DESIRES GOOD LOOKS ABOVE MANY OTHER THINGS--

Call it pride, or what you will, most people like to be admired and to be complimented on appearance.

Dr. Painless Parker Says:

"Natural features are distorted and youth leaves your face when teeth are neglected. There is no greater handicap to appearance or health than poor or missing teeth. If teeth are lost have them replaced with new style dental plates."

Transparent dental plates offer natural effects.

When restorations are being made choose the material all dentists acclaim for its quality of faithful reproduction. Plates with crystal clear palates reflect the actual tissues of the mouth. These dentures are lighter in weight, but have a tested balance and wearing efficiency. They do not warp.

Translucent teeth for dental plates

Science has perfected artificial teeth in the size and shape of fine natural teeth. They have a soft surface lustre and absorb and reflect light as do your present ones.
