PORTLAND, July 26 (AP)—Police were searching today for persons who vandalized the Japanese cemetery here, burning wooden grave markers and uprooting stone monuments.

What had once been neat lines of gravestones lay like rubble along the fence of the cemetery, desecrated before in 1943. A nearby resident extinguished a fire set among wooden grave markers.

George J. Claus, juvenile court officer, said the stones were so scattered they probably never could be returned to the proper graves.

A young boy, previously arrested for larceny, confessed to part of the destruction, Claus said. "But I don't believe boys alone would have been capable of it all," he added. "There are ponderous stones toppled over and broken which youngsters simply would not have the strength to move."
