Little Things Small Jobs Now Save Later

By MAXINE BUREN It's a very simple matter not to spend money, and to refrain from buying unnecessary things once one puts the mind to it and really wants to. It is knowing when to draw the line on a nonspending spree that really takes

Keeping up the morale of your house, making repairs necessary to stand off deterioration is real economy, even though we know that we must do only what is

The man of the house (once his clever wife gets his ego going) could do many of the small repairs so necessary to keep the house from going into disrepair these years.

A little paint here and there does wonders to preserve wood and make the place look spick and span. And here is a chance perhaps to use up some of the odds and ends of paint left from the days when a new can of paint was bought for every occasion. In case the quantities are small, a combining of them might work out for freshening up certain spots. If possible use up all the paint that remains in the basement or garage before buying more.

Small roof repairs are necessary frequently and should not be neglected, for even the smallest leak may prove a financial catastrophe if plaster is dampened or good furniture ruined.

Small repairs on plumbing may easily be undertaken by the man or woman of the family without calling a professional. Leaking faucets, aside from being annoying, are sometimes the cause of bigger troubles. Washers can be replaced by the family handiman or woman who has a screwdriver and a wrench. Washers are still available at the hardware counter, although it might be wise to check first on the type and size of washer needed.

Cleaning out sink drains may be merely a matter of putting commercial preparations down the drain, but they may also take more than a mere superficial cleaning. Before you call the plumber to clean out sluggish drains, call at his shop and have

HORSERADISH CREAM SAUCE

2 cups cream or evaporated milk

2 tablespoons butter 2 egg yolks 1/2 cup grated horseradish

Boil cream rapidly until reduced to half, stirring frequently. Beat in butter, then remove from heat and rapidly stir in slightly beaten egg yolks. Add horseradish and stir over heat without allowing sauce to reach boiling point. Add salt, depending on fish to be served and taste of diners.

put down the drain-then follow directions. It may save a plumber's bill and also may save a serious sink stoppage later. Drains accumulate grease and hair, slowly building up a coating which eventually clogs the pipe completely.

Electric repairs are more serious considerations for the ama-teur, because a miscalculation as to the way of repairing electric appliances may either cause nage to the appliance, to the house or to the amateur electri-cian. Watch out for frayed electric cords and loose connections in plugs and fixtures. If you have a talented repairman in the family, or know enough about the principles of electric wiring to undertake the job see that repairs are made before the trouble shows up.

Rugs that need rebinding, furniture that should be smoothed off on the corners, floors that need paint or varnish will all deteriorate quickly if left without repairs, but take only a few minutes to fix if caught in time.

So look over your home, check on the things that need to be done, and make all necessary repairs for those faithful things that must do at least for the duraation and perhaps "for six months after".

Small Increase In Stoves

Because of a small increase in the supply of cooking stoves available for civilians, rationing restrictions on these stoves have been relaxed slightly, Charles B. Maxfield, district OPA fuel rationing representative, announced, under a new ruling effective August 5.

Any person is now eligible for a certificate provided he has no other means of cooking, whether or not the stove is to be used in what is considered "essential" living or working space, Maxfield explained. Maxfield also announced that conversion burners for ranges used in cooking may be obtained by dealers, distributors and manufacturers certificate - free supply:-
