Lively Political Activity Due In Five States This Week

By the Associated Press

A search by New York republican leaders for a candidate for US senator who will attract most support to the ticket headed by Presidential Candidate Thomas E. Dewey highlights a new burst of political activities in four states today.

The New York republican state committee will pick a candidate who most likely will be opposed by the democratic veteran, Sen.

Robert F. Wagner. The democratic state committee, also meeting today, is expected to renominate Wagner, sponsor of the social security and national labor relations acts.

Likewise attracting national attention, Arkansas democrats will choose their nominee for US senator in a runoff primary between Gov. Homer M. Adkins and Rep. J. W. Fulbright. The winner will seek the seat of defeated democratic Sen. Hattie W. Caraway. Fulbright's "lasting peace" resolution put him under the international spotlight in his first term in the house, but Gov. Adkins criticizes it as failing "to offer any plan in any sense of the word."

Connecticut republicans in state convention expect to renominate US Sen. John A. Danaher, representative - at - Large Boleslaus J. Monkiewicz, and Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin. They also will choose a complete state ticket.

The following day, republican district conventions will be held in Connecticut to nominate five candidates for US representatives. Clare Booths Luce, congressman from the fourth district, will be among those seeking renomination.

Delaware democrats have postponed until Aug. 19 their primary to elect delegates to a state convention at which they will choose nominees for US representative, governor, legislature and a state ticket.
