Postwar Food Subsidizing Contemplated

expected to tell congress in the near future that a vast program End Courses for subsidizing domestic conmption of food may become necessary to prevent a sharp postwar break in food and farm prices.

End of the war this year would find the government with huge reserves of food and agriculture producing for a war-induced market that no longer existed. Food production is one third greater than pre-war levels. While large quantities may be needed for foreign relief, officials doubt whether export and domestic demands would take the full out-

A congressional directive that the government support farm prices at not less than 90 per cent of parity for two years after the war may make necessary, officials say, the use of such mechanisms as the food stamp program, greatly broadened school lunch and other programs for handling extra supplies until production can be brought into line with peacetime requirements.

The food stamp program was used to dispose of surplus foods before the war, but it was suspended when supplies became tight. Under it the government issued stamps to low-income families useable for the purchase of designated foods at regular grocery stores.

Senior Brother At Mt. Angel

MT. ANGEL, Aug. 10-Brother John Pfiffner, OSB, 79, and senior brother of St. Benedict's abbey, died at the monastery_at 11 p.m. Wednesday night. He had been bedridden for two months. Previous to that he still worked daily in the abbey woods, cleaning out brush, cutting wood and uprooting the persistent poison

Brother John was born Oct. 16, 1864, in the canton of St. Gallen, Switzerland. He came to the United States and to Mt. Angel in 1887, a few years after the founding of the monastery by Father Adelhelm Odermatt. He made his profession as a brother April 27,

Most of his time during the following years was spent in working on the abbey farm. In 1924 he was appointed to take over the janitor work of the Benedictine Press, the abbey's printing establishment.

Several years ago he had to give up this work due to failing eyesight. An operation restored his sight sufficiently to permit his taking over the care of the acres of forest that surround the approach to the hilltop. Here he worked daily, turning the untidy woods into a natural park.

On April 27, 1940, he celebrated the golden jubilee of his religious profession.

Funeral services will be conducted from the abbey chapel Saturday morning at 8 o'clock and interment will be in the nearby abbey cemetery. Unger Mortuary is in charge.
