Outdoor Living

Outdoor livingrooms play an important part in the lives of Willamette valley families, who find that dining before outdoor fireplaces very much to their liking.
