Trend Upward The upward trend in prices of oats and barley in the Portland market which began last week, continued during the week ended-August 24, according to reports tothe War Food administration. Trading was considerably more active in these feed grains, espe-cially in feeding barley. Market firmness and activity was principally attributed to the continued good demand from mixed feed manufacturers and feeders for feed grains. Continued lack of corn offerings into this area from the Midwest and scarcity of wheat millfeed offerings in the open market, were important factors in the improved inquiry for oats and barley during the past two weeks. An improved demand for malting barley from this area was reported from Midwestern maltsters. Harvest of winter grain is practically complete over large areas in Oregon and much spring grain has been harvested. Harvest was slightly delayed by morning dew locally during the week ended August 22. Unirrigated corn needs rain, but irrigated corn is doing well, although much of it is late in eastern countries. The week was favorable for late haying and for cutting and threshing grass and legume seed. Unirrigated pastures continue to deteriorate and some cattle have been turned into stubble fields. However, over considerable areas in eastern Oregon.

range feed is holding out well. The barley market at Portland showed increased activity during the past seven days and continued on the upward trend in prices.
