Red Cross Specialist Will Speak at Kiwanis Meeting

Mrs. Claude B. Mickelwait, volunteer national staff member of the American Red Cross who is a specialist on relief to prisoners of war, will speak before the Kiwanis club, Tuesday, September 12, at 12 o'clock noon at the Marion hotel, it was announced today by William Hamilton, vice-chairman of the Marion county chapter.

The speaker, whose husband and three sons are members of the armed forces, will explain the present status of war prisoners as it exists both in the Far East and European camps. Next-of-kin of prisoners, relatives of men missing in action and all interested residents of Marion county are invited to attend.

Will Give Figures
Exact figures and first hand information on relief supplies, including food, clothing and comfort articles reaching the prisoners through Red Cross channels will be fully explained by Mrs. Mickelwait, Hamilton stated.

Despite all difficulties, the Red Cross at the present time, is sending six different packages regularly from the United States to prisoners in Europe. In the Far East, approximately 150,000 food packages have been delivered and arrangements have been made for one more emergency cable a year to be sent by the next-of-kin in addition to the one message previously allowed.

To Describe Mailings
Extensive planes made possible through cooperation of the war and postoffice departments to fly mail to prisoners in the Far East, expediting the receipt of mail both by the people in camps and their families back home, will also be described by Mrs. Mickelwait.

Mrs. Mickelwait, who was formerly chairman of the District of Columbia chapter staff assistant corps in Washington, D. C., has for the past year been traveling as a volunteer prisoner of war speaker for the American Red Cross. She recently completed a tour of the midwestern states and is now visiting Red Cross chapters in the northwest. She is the wife of Colonel Mickelwait, judge advocate of the 12th army corps on Gen. Omar Bradley's staff now in France. She is a native of Georgia and has lived all over the United States, including Panama.

Chamber Sets First Meeting

Postwar planning and the season's first luncheon will mark activities of the Salem chamber of commerce next week.

The luncheon, in the chamber of commerce rooms at noon Monday, have as its principal speaker Col. Ralph Tudor, army engineer in charge of the Portland district, who will talk on flood control projects in the northwest.

At a board of directors meeting Wednesday, the directorate will decide whether the chamber should start a postwar city planning program and appoint a committee to further the plan. Questions relative to the development of Bush pasture also will be discussed.

Salem Lions Hear Bennett

"No man has really lived until he has gone the second mile, the one beyond that which is required," Frank Bennett, Salem school superintendent, said in a talk to members of the Salem Lions club Thursday noon.

"We are so busy making a living that we think we are living, but until we begin to share with others, we have not lived."

Bennett made the sharing a part of family, business and church life.

"No higher compliment can be paid you than to have the boys play ball with you in the street," the speaker said in closing a talk illustrated with personal experiences and stories. Special attention was called to the fat stock sale Friday afternoon by the 4-H clubs at the fairgrounds.

Final Hearing On Code Set

Final hearing on the adoption of the proposed revised safety code governing operations in the Oregon logging industry will be conducted by the state industrial accident commission here September 27, commission officials announced Thursday.

Preliminary hearings have been held in Portland, Salem, Eugene, Prineville, Baker, Klamath Falls and Marshfield.

Proposed changes in the code include minimum standards of operation of gasoline engines and electric power saws and clarification of existing rules and regulations.

Early in the morning word came that stranded American paratroopers, dropped 10 miles out of their zone and surrounded, needed a guide. They were many miles away. She had been several nights without sleep. But "Fredricka" went.

That she did get them out, that she later became their general's right hand man, that she now works ceaselessly both militarily and to help straighten out tangled civilian affairs, are all a matter of army record.

But all this seems anti-climactic to the "girl with the blonde streak" in her hair, whose first words to the Yanks as the tears streamed down her tanned cheeks were:

"Okay, kid; it's okay now."

4500 Nurses Must Report In September

An additional 4500 nurses must be assigned to the army and navy nurses corps in September, the largest monthly quota yet requested of the American Red Cross recruiting agency, according to Louise Arneson, director of nursing for the Marion county chapter.

In order to fill Marion county's quota, the local procurement and assignment committee has classified every known nurse in the county, of which there are over 500, and will contact each eligible one personally by September 11.

Information on the requested quota came from the Pacific area office of the American Red Cross at San Francisco. The release stated that recruitment fell to the lowest level of the war during the summer. The invasion of Europe failed to bring the recruitment rush that Pearl Harbor did.

There are 50,000 nurses now in the armed services.

To relieve the acute shortage of nurses now at local hospitals, which will be even greater upon recruitment for army and navy, the nursing service of the Red Cross is attempting to secure an even larger group of women to take nurses aide training. Registration, according to Mrs. Arneson, is being taken now at the Red Cross offices. One hundred more nurses aides are wanted to assist at hospitals to relieve the shortage. Some discussion has taken place at the Red Cross regarding a possible recruitment of retired nurses to work on a part-time basis at the hospitals, Mrs. Arneson states.

They got away in the nick of time. The frustrated gestapo and Vichy police arriving a few hours later, completely wrecked the house in anger. Barely escaping allied bomb fragments as the German headquarters at Pegamos was destroyed, they arrived safely at a peasant's house, and sent word through the grapevine to allied airmen about the gun emplacements. Apparently the map had been lost with "St. Paul's" death.

The planes knocked every one of them out a few hours later," she said.
