Cook Finds Old Meat Favorite Back Among Familiar Cuts at Butcher's

platter.

By Maxine Buren For months I have been watching the grocers' shelves. seeking vainly for even one can of corned beef. I don't want corned beef hash, I want to make my own hash, and see no reason why the canneries with a little corned beef to spare, must always add other ingredients. Then, having a brilliant idea, I asked the meat man if he has any corned beef-and he does. Why it never occurred to me to ask I do not know except that over two years ago I went trustfully into the meat market, asked for corned beef and was told it was not available. I have never asked for it since.

Today's corned beef is not really "corned" at all, not cured by the process of a thousand years ago, when a corn and water mix was used, and then the meat was highly salted to keep without refrigeration. Modern methods cure it mildly to a uniform consistency, no parboiling is necessary. Brisket corned beef is best.

The good old fashioned New England dinner is my favorite, and especially when made with fresh cut cabbage right out of the backyard garden. Here is the real New England dinner recipe:

Simmer corned beef in water to cover for 21/2 hours. Skim off excess fat and add 6 parsnips (this is for 4 pounds of beef), cut in half lengthwise, add also 6 small carrots, 6 medium po-tatoes and 1 medium sized cabbage cut in quarters. Cook an-

There are several schools of though on corned beef hash, Some very good cooks advocate moist hash, others, equally skilled in cooking will have nothing but a dry hash come from their kitchens. Some like the ingredients chopped up rather small, others prefer larger pieces. One cook even adds sour cream to her corned beef hash.

But whatever school of thought you consider yours, plan to have some nice corned beef hash-and soon.

Jefferson Has Gov. and Mrs. Dewey Welcomed at Seattle Depot Parke Davis Visits Family

DALLAS, Sept. 19-Parke Dennis, with the merchant marine, is here for a visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle P. Dennis. The family lives in Dallas, but his father is employed in Salem. Parke Dennis has just had a six months' sea voyage to the Admiralty Islands and other points in the South Pacific. One of the incidents of the trip was being caught on a reef for five days, after the drinking water was gone. Distilled sea-water was used, for the three weeks or until they reached port. Parke says that such water can be downed, but is not relished, even when disguised in coffee. He will have a three weeks' vacation before returning to San Francisco for further assignment. Carol Dennis, a younger daughter of the Dennis', who has been visiting in San Francisco, returned with her brother, to be here for the opening of school next Monday.
