C of C Hears Carney Talk On American Industry at War

"We must not confuse inconvenience with violence; they're not the same thing at all!" Ralph W. Carney, America's star salesman, told the more than 200 persons who filled to overflowing the Salem Chamber of Commerce floral room for Monday's noon luncheon forum. For one hour listeners sat motionless and at the close of the address, rose to their feet with repeated rounds of applause.

In this country only those who have lost loved ones have to date really participated in the war, Carney maintained, dramatically telling the story of the last five minutes in the life of a man on a battlefield. The youth who did not choose to fight but went without dissent to his country's service, did not ask what hours he would have to work, nor seek "foxhole to fox-hole pay," declared Carney.

Blasphemy Strikers
Labor leaders who place union above country, workers who lay down their tools are as surely disloyal as would be any fighting man who would lay down his weapons, he declared.

On the whole, labor in this country has fought valiantly, contributed greatly and been a positive factor in the successful prosecution of the war, the speaker said.

American industry, by the rapidity with which it has turned to war manufacture, by the efficiency with which it has operated in time of national stress and emergency has proved its self-sufficiency, he maintained. But that has not kept "parlor pinks, racketeers and leftwingers, who are moved by envy and frustration because they have never made a success of anything" from sneering, he pointed out.

Business Starts Small
Big business, like an adult, started small. It has provided at constantly lowering costs the goods which have lifted this country's standard of living, Carney said, adding softly his wish that government follow in the path business has pioneered.

Just as certain elements speak of big business in tones labeling it as always dishonest, so Henry Wallace speaking of human values as paramount seems to take it for granted that business has no place for human values, Carney declared.

Wars of Japs
The whole country is in danger of taking for granted that V-day in Europe will mean the beginning of the end of the war, the speaker maintained. Using a background map he pointed out the extent of the Japanese empire, in land miles greater than the entire area of the United States and Mexico.

To date, this country's forces have not met a quarter million of Japan's 5,000,000 man army, and 8,000,000 reserves are said to stand behind that aggregation, he declared.

Newspaper headlines which play up small victories too often give the impression that the battle is easy and the victory close, Carney maintained. Neither air nor sea forces, but infantrymen will be the final victors, he declared, using the weapons produced in this country by free enterprise and free labor.

Salem CAP Unit Plans Program
—A training and recruiting program for the year for civil air patrol cadets was outlined Sunday afternoon when the officers of the Salem unit met at the home of Lt. Fannie Douglas. It was decided to change Thursday night meetings at the armory from 8 to 7:30 o'clock.

"Y" to Offer Two Courses In Spanish

Spanish classes for both beginners and advanced students will be conducted at the YMCA during the fall and winter period by Raul Valle-Rodas, who received a master's degree from Pinetown university after graduating from a Bolivian college.

Instruction for beginners will be given every Tuesday night, beginning October 24, at 7:45 p.m., while advanced pupils' classes will open October 27 and continue on a weekly basis each Friday thereafter. Each course will consist of 20 lessons.

Persons interested in attending Valle-Rodas' classes should register at the "Y" desk as soon as possible, Alice Cray Brown, chairman of the YMCA Spanish committee, a division of the education board, announced yesterday.

Safety Group To End Meet Here Today

A streamlined program marked the opening session of the first annual Oregon industrial safety conference which convened Monday morning at the Marion hotel and will be concluded with a final session this afternoon scheduled to be held at the state capitol building.

More than 100 delegates, representing all sections of the state attended Monday's meetings. The opening morning session was addressed by Ray Carr, Portland, former regional director of the National Safety Council, who has long been identified with safety work in Oregon. Other morning sessions speakers included L. O. Arens, T. Morris Dunne, members of the state industrial accident commission and Ralph W. Emmons, administration.

The afternoon was given over to section training classes covering the organization and functioning of safety committees, stimulation of interest, plant investigation and accident investigation. These sectional classes were conducted by Robert M. Evenden, director of the division; Charles F. Bollinger, assistant director; Russell Jones and John Carter.

Dr. O. R. Chambers, head of the department of psychology at the state college at Corvallis as the speaker at the evening session, which was followed by motion pictures.

Training classes will be held all this morning with a general assembly at the Marion hotel scheduled for 1:15 p.m., the closing meeting to convene at 3 o'clock. Evenden is general chairman of the conference.

Ralph Curtis Buys Share in Alaska Paper

Ralph C. Curtis, former managing editor and assistant publisher of the Oregon Statesman for many years, will leave next week for Ketchikan, Alaska, where he has purchased an interest in the Ketchikan Chronicle, an afternoon daily newspaper.

Curtis has been editor of the St. Helens, Ore., Sentinel-Mist since early this year.

Mrs. Curtis and the Curtis' three children, Phyllis Jean, Carolyn and David, will remain in St. Helens for several more months.

Two other former members of The Statesman's staff also are connected with the Alaska newspaper — William L. Baker, employed here in 1935 and later managing editor of the Coos Bay Times at Marshfield, and Hale Tabor, who was employed by The Statesman news department while he was attending Willamette university. Tabor recently has been editor of the Sitka, Alaska, Sentinel.

Curtis and Baker will be associated as publishers of the Ketchikan Chronicle.

Property Law Briefs Ready

Briefs for intervention in the United States supreme court appeal involving the constitutionality of the Oklahoma community property law have been completed by the attorney general's office here and will be filed shortly. The Oregon community property law was passed by the 1943 legislature and was copied largely from the Oklahoma act. The Oklahoma law was upheld by the federal court of appeals in Denver, and the government appealed. Oregon, appearing as a friend of the court, will seek to have the law upheld.

4500 Meals A Day

Great Northern dining car stewards, chefs and waiters know that train travel is setting records. They are providing nearly 4,500 meals daily for patrons of the Empire Builder and other trains on the railway.

That's many, many times a peacetime day's meal service; but, we're doing it with the same number of dining cars we operated before the war, and with fewer experienced men.

Our chefs still manage to produce traditional specialties. One of them is chicken pie, prime favorite of GIs and civilian travelers. The war has changed neither the quality of Great Northern chicken pie, nor the dependability of the railway's service.
