Eating Time

Autumn Good Time for Cooks When Appetites Keen, Food Abundant

By Maxine Buren
The abundance of vegetables and a sharpening of appetites comes along about this time every autumn, which really works out pretty well. Fall vegetables are colorful, and therefore attractive to select at the market and to prepare at home.

Food in the valley is especially plentiful, prices moderate. Looking over the market offerings we find:
Eggplant, that vegetable that by rights should appear in late summer and fall, but often appears almost all year. Added interest can be given to eggplant by the good cook, when she includes recipes for baking it in her repertoire. Parboil a whole eggplant until partially done, then make slits in it, almost through but leaving enough solid to hold it in place. Into the cuts put meat cakes made of seasoned ground lamb. Put in a moderate oven and bake until meat is done.

Corn, the next vegetable on the list is practically gone, but there still remain some good ears.

Beets, summer and winter vegetable, is in market and might appear on the menu as either hot or cold Harvard style. A sweet-sour sauce is made with vinegar and sugar or with lemon and orange juice and sugar, is thickened with cornstarch and allowed to stand on sliced beets for half an hour or so in a warm place. The flavor of ground cloves is very good with the beets.

Greens which have appeared in the shops in variety, spinach has been joined by mustard greens and Swiss chard. Some cooks like to combine the three for interest in flavors.

Turnips, one of the all-winter root vegetables, are in now. Try mashing turnips with potatoes sometime.

Green beans, remain in markets, green peas and cucumbers, last of the true summer vegetables to sell. Added interest is

Mrs. Craig Coyner is leaving today for Bend to be a guest at the home of her husband's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Craig Coyner, sr. She has been visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Batty Cooper.

The Joshua Smith auxiliary sewing club will meet with Mrs. Sylvia Shaupe at 632 North Liberty street for an all day meeting on Saturday. A paper sack luncheon will be served at noon.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Shinn have been in Portland visiting at the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. William J. Kerr.

SILVERTON—Barbara McDonald, newly installed worthy advisor, presided at the Rainbow Girls meeting Tuesday night when Mrs. W. P. Scarth, Jr., mother advisor, reported that the girls had made $62.35 on their recent rummage sale. She also reported that coffee jars were no longer needed in the war efforts. The members had planned to collect these as one of their projects. During the business session, plans were made and committee appointed for winter activities. Included were the party for the Woodburn girls October 17; a Monday night sewing bee to work on baby gowns for the local hospital, and a Halloween party on October 28. Miss Bette Vorseth will head the dance committee. Marilyn Moe was appointed as chairman of the sunshine committee, and Edna Roop as chairman of decorations.

given to green beans by cooking with a dash of sour cream. Peas can be made to go farther by cooking with carrots.

Carrots browned in butter, make a delightful fall dish. CARROTS VICHY
Cook scraped carrots in water until almost done, adding a bay-leaf to the water. Slice in thin discs. Fry in a little butter, turning carefully so carrots will be brown on both sides. Remove to a hot dish and sprinkle with parsley.

Squash is very much in evidence, summer and winter, yellow, white and green, it is all in the market. Steamed scalloped squash makes a good vegetable when seasoned with onion and tomato. Hubbard, marblehead or Danish, baked with sausage or beef cakes make the main dish.

Some people like to cook their cucumbers along toward the last of the season when cucumbers are low in price.

STUFFED CUCUMBERS
Pour boiling water over cucumbers and let stand for 15 minutes. Drain and peel, scoop out centers and fill with a mixture of chopped ham and rice. Season and brown on all sides in bacon drippings or other fat and put in a baking dish. Cover with sour cream or sweet cream with a little lemon juice and bake in a moderate oven for half an hour.

Cauliflower and its cousins, cabbage and broccoli make good boiling. Try with cheese sauce for a family supper dish. Celery is supposed to be a good buy, and it should be watched for specials, but the quality is not up to the usual perfection as higher grades often go elsewhere. Celery root is coming into market, good for soup or to be made into salad when boiled and then chilled.

Yams have joined potatoes for baking purposes.

County Profits In Bridge Deal

Two birds are being killed with one stone in the salvaging of a wooden bridge by the county on the north fork of the Santiam, it was disclosed today by County Engineer Nathan C. Hubbs.

Several years ago a sawmill erected the bridge as a means of egress from its property. When the logging stopped the span was abandoned. One end eventually loosened and the bridge, hinging on one side swung across the stream. It was in that condition when the county came upon a deposit of rock it needed in that area.

The rock is located on the north side of the stream and the county decided the only feasible location for the crusher was on the south side. Hence the old bridge is being relocated for use of trucks hauling rock to the crusher.

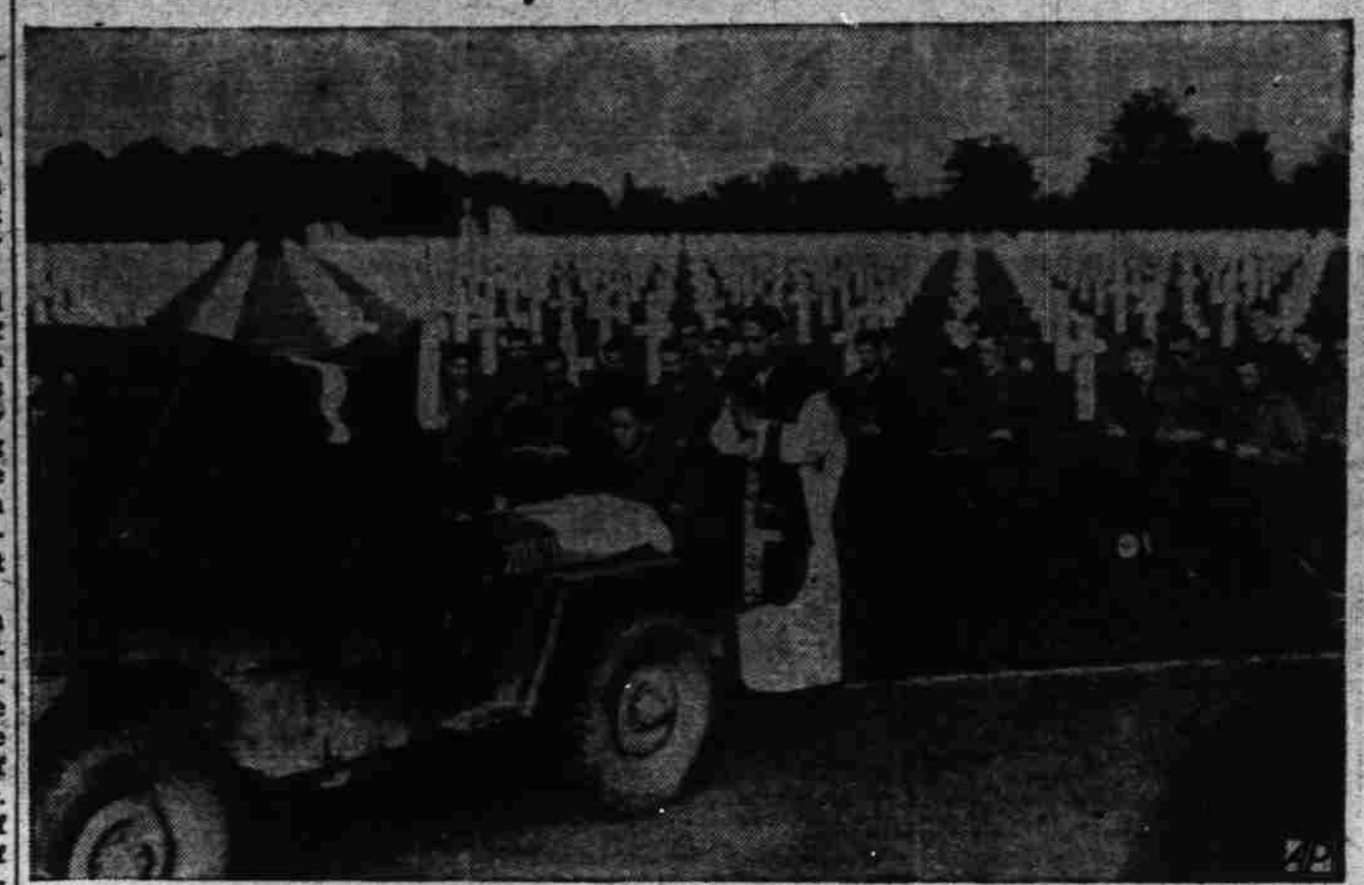

A tractor is doing the job of resetting the span with the aid of cables. A free bridge, plus availability of needed rock thus is being obtained by the county.

How is the Harvest coming?

To help our many customer-friends and distributors, we make this second Del Monte report on canned fruit and vegetable prospects

In just the last few weeks—since we last reported to you on canned fruit and vegetable prospects—three important things have happened:

- the War Food Administration has increased percentages of several items to be set aside for military use.
- weather has definitely cut down a number of pack estimates.
- the manpower situation has become more difficult.

That is why Del Monte, as the leading canner of fruits and vegetables, is continuing to issue this wartime series of reports. During this emergency, all of us must work together. Only with knowledge of what lies ahead can any housewife intelligently plan her shopping or understand the problems facing her grocer.

Fruit Situation Tight

Peaches are a good example of what can happen to a canning crop. Prospects were good for a bumper yield of fresh peaches in California, when stretches of extremely hot weather matured the fruit so fast that canneries could not handle the full crop with available manpower.

This cut down the whole industry's pack. Though we had hoped to do better, it now looks as if the total national pack this year will be only about average, or slightly over average at best.

A month ago, the industry knew the government's requirements for canned peaches would be very heavy. Since then, the Quartermaster's Department has upped its quotas still further. This means that supplies for civilians will be materially less than last year.

On pears, while the pack turned out better than early estimates and will probably exceed last year's, government needs are larger also, and the amount of canned pears on your grocer's shelves will be very small.

The industry hopes to "put up" slightly more fruit cocktail than last year but quotas for our fighters have also grown—so again, it means less of this popular fruit at your grocer's.

Del Monte Pineapple and Pineapple Juice will be still scarcer than last year. Pineapple is a two-year crop. The drought of 1943 meant that we were not able to pack a normal amount in 1944—in spite of a favorable ripening season. Military requirements have also been increased.

The good news in the fruit picture is apricots. A bumper crop resulted in the largest pack on record. Though military wants are twice as great as in 1943, you can expect as many Del Monte Apricots as you ever did.

In total, fruits will be available to civilians in very limited quantities.

Total Civilian Vegetable Supply About 20% Less

On vegetables—as on fruits—remember that we are telling the story of total supply and what is likely to happen on the home front if present military demands continue.

However, this picture could radically change on vegetables if the government reduced quotas out of this year's pack, or released substantial quantities from reserves.

In our last report, we estimated that the industry's pack of canned peas would be less. Now we know the amount available for civilians will be about a fifth less than last year.

The government quota on corn has not increased. But the total crop was smaller and the supply for civilians will be considerably less than last year.

Asparagus production slightly exceeded last year. Military needs also increased, so the civilian supply is approximately the same as last season. It is expected that the supply of green beans will be slightly less.

We had hoped to have good news on beets and carrots. But the armed forces asked the industry to supply them with three times as many carrots as last year, and twice as many beets. So even if packers succeed in producing a much larger volume, civilians won't see as many as last year.

The canned tomato pack will not be completed before the end of October. However, it now appears that it will be less than last year. Consequently the amount available for home consumption will be materially less because the government has almost doubled its requirements.

On the whole, the civilian supply of canned vegetables apparently will be about one-fifth less than last year, barring reduction in government quotas or release from its reserves.

But whatever Del Monte Products are available, you should be able to get your share of them.

As we said before, Del Monte Foods will be apportioned to distributors throughout the country on a fair and square basis. This has been our policy ever since the war began.

Del Monte deliveries are also spread throughout the year, so you can usually expect to find at least some varieties of Del Monte Fruits and Vegetables at your grocer's.

You have a right to your share of these Del Monte Foods, so don't hesitate to ask for them. If you can't find just the one you want, you may still find some other Del Monte variety that will serve your purpose.

That's one advantage of learning how to "switch and swap" within the Del Monte line. Del Monte packs so many different products, that no matter which varieties happen to be short, you can choose any other Del Monte Food your grocer has and always be sure of the same quality and flavor.

Your Grocer's Troubles Aren't Over

You can easily see, too, that all your grocer's problems are not solved. Remember that a leading brand like Del Monte is always the first to be taken from his shelves. Don't blame him for shortages and inconveniences.

Your cooperation is still needed to help everyone in the food industry do a better job for you and for the servicemen fighting for you.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"It sounds almost like a miracle, Judge... how did we ever do it?"

"American industry did it, Sally. When the Japs conquered the chief natural rubber producing centers of the world they thought they had dealt a death blow to our war effort. But, in less than two years, we are producing enough synthetic rubber in this country to supply all our military and essential civilian requirements.

"Our rubber experts knew how to make it but the most practical process at the time required huge amounts of industrial alcohol... far beyond the already overtaxed capacity of our industrial alcohol plants. So, overnight, our country's beverage distillers stopped making whiskey and produced hundreds of millions of gallons of the vitally needed alcohol.

"As a matter of fact, Sally, a high government official said recently... synthetic rubber is from 6 to 9 months ahead of where it could have been if alcohol had not been available for butadiene production."

"We were really fortunate, weren't we Judge, to have a beverage distilling industry in existence... able to help perform this great wartime miracle!"
