Hello Again Dried Fruits Will Appear Soon in Markets in Time for Holiday Trade

Civilians will see more dried fruit shortly, with some available for the holiday trade. Packers of dried fruit have been authorized to release substantial quantities to civilians.

Raisins, currants and dried prunes have been on the market, from time to time, but it has been hard to find apricots, peaches and figs. Resumption of importation from Iraq accounts for the promised appearance of dates.

A few of these fruits have already appeared in the market, and women will have to reacquaint themselves again with recipes for their use.

Dried apricots make a good pie, and here's the recipe:
APRICOT PUFF PIE
Cook dried apricots until soft, measure one cup chopped pulp and sweeten to taste. Beat three egg whites, add 3 tablespoons sugar, a teaspoon vanilla, and fold in the fruit. Fill in a baked shell and bake for half an hour at 275 degrees.

This recipe is good when dried peaches or prunes are used.
A date soufflé is another excellent recipe using dried fruit.
DATE SOUFFLE
1 1/2 cups milk
1/2 cup sugar
1 tablespoon butter
1/2 cup flour
3 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup stoned dates, chopped
Mix flour and sugar, add scalded milk gradually, and cook in the double boiler until thick. Add butter and cool. Add beaten yolks, vanilla, dates and fold in.

beat egg whites last. Bake in a pan of hot water in a 350 degree oven until set, or about 40 minutes. Serve with ORANGE SABAYON SAUCE
Beat 1 whole egg and 2 extra yolks, add 1/2 cup sugar and 1/2 cup orange juice and cook in double boiler until thick. Cool, add 1 teaspoon lemon juice and 1/2 cup cream, whipped.

No More Canned Grapefruit Yet

According to a bulletin put out by the war food administration, only enough tin cans will be allowed the grapefruit people to put up segments to fill the quota for government requirements. That means that for the third successive season, grapefruit segments will be unavailable to civilian buyers.
As to citrus fruit juices, some 26,500,000 cases of juice will be available to civilians from this year's pack. This is a little less than last year.

FRUIT took a town today!

AMERICAN troops want the truth told about what they are doing. If a soldier reads an account of a battle action in which he shared and comments "Boy, that's the way we took the town," a war correspondent can hit his target that night content that he has performed the highest function of a front-line reporter. The troops do not want to be misinformed. On the other hand, the enemy can't want the a sacrifice, a victory, or a defeat. Numbers of them are killed. They just want the people they are fighting for to know that's the way we took the town, a war correspondent can hit his target that night content that he has performed the highest function of a front-line reporter. The troops do not want to be misinformed. To write war news, this is the aim of every Associated Press Battlefront reporter. Indeed, it is their only aim.
