 laid an egg right on that table 20 minutes later, he just nodded and picked it up and fried it."
 Friends are trying to get the Legion of Merit or some other decoration for Pfc. Rocco Graziano of Brooklyn, N.Y., who took a bunch of C-ration biscuits, crumbled them in water and molded them in a flat dish and came forth with an edible piecrust. Cpl. Cyril J. Puhala of Braddock, Penn., Rocco's buddy, said it tasted good, adding "we still don't believe it."
 A patrol included Staff Sgt. James Brown of Georgetown, Tex.; Sgt. George Florence of Falmouth, Ky., and three Pfc.'s, Victory Fields of Limona, Fla., Lee Jones of Lone Oak, Tex., and Lester Gillespie of Yates Center, Kas., was sent on a mission to clean out a small French house up ahead.

 They didn't find any Germans, but what they did find was a Frenchwoman who had a gift ready for the liberators whenever they arrived. Following their noses, they located it—a crisp, delicious deep-dish apple pie.
 After they ate that one, she gave them two others to take back to their buddies. But they remembered they had been assigned to clean out the house themselves and decided to take the order literally.
 This doesn't exactly concern food and it doesn't have a happy ending. But the story that Lt. Arnold Korchman of the Bronx, N.Y., tells about his jeep driver,

Citrus Trees Doing Well in Marshfield
 MARSHFIELD, Oct. 21—(AP)—Mrs. C. R. Sprague of Marshfield points with pride to two healthy growing orange trees and a blooming lemon tree bearing one lemon, both of which she transplanted to her yard.
 Pvt. Elmer Lutz of Peoria, Ill., is indirectly connected with the subject.
 It seems that these two infantrymen were driving down a road when a group of hidden Germans opened fire on them, forcing them to hit the dirt and abandon their jeep temporarily. Later they got the jeep back but that didn't satisfy Private Lutz.
 "He's mad at the whole German army," Korchman said. "When he hit the dirt he lost his false teeth."

Vanport May Be Converted
 PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 21—(AP)—Plans to convert Vanport, Oregon's second largest city, into a model industrial center when war industries no longer employ its 40,000 residents, were disclosed here today.
 Chester Moores, chairman of the federal housing authority, said he had asked Washington, D.C., authorities to approve his recommendation that the 790-acre, largest war housing unit in the country, be used for peacetime industry.
 The plan, which has the backing of Mayor Earl Riley and other officials, calls for orderly demolition of the temporary houses and other buildings as the war industry need for them passes.

 Moores said there are "upward of 50 industries" interested in post-war operation in the Portland area.
