Delos James Tells of New Ag Problems

"New phases of agricultural adjustment problems are arising and it is certain that joint action by farmers and businessmen on the fundamentals involved will be necessary in order that a sound program may be formulated," Delos L. James, manager of the agricultural department of the United States Chamber of Commerce, declared here Monday.

Speaking before a group of mid-valley men representing various agricultural interests, James discussed the trends in federal legislation in relation to agriculture.

Primarily designed to aid the economic status of the farmer, recent federal legislation has the effect of giving to the government "wide control over farming operations and the development of government competition in the merchandising of farm products," James maintained.

If use of government funds for subsidies as a means of holding a check on living costs, is to continue, farmers and other businessmen must cooperate to understand and control the controls, the speaker indicated.

The chambers of commerce of the land are more deeply interested in agriculture today than ever before, James said, declaring them "anxious first of all to obtain a better understanding of its trade area farmers' agricultural problems and ready and willing to assist in the improvements which will insure a higher net return to the farmer and in turn to those who distribute and process his products."

Magazines Are Needed as Aids in Scrap Books

Mrs. Verne Ostrander, chairman of the scrap book service, is asking that magazines be left at the USO on Chemeketa street where a workroom has been arranged and a filing system installed.

Continued stories, serials and short stories are sought. Volunteers are declared needed to help in the work-shop.

Mrs. Ostrander said that on Wednesday night a large group was expected to volunteer their services, and that she planned to have the workshop open five days a week and every evening.

"After stories are torn out of magazines, the balance will be turned over to the paper drive," she said.

May Outlines Oregon City's Future Plans

Salem took the capitol away from Oregon City and perhaps thereby saved the southern part of the state for Oregon, Walter W. R. May told members of the Salem Chamber of Commerce Monday in a pointing out that each town has a history which goes "way back when."

The editor of the Oregon City Enterprise headed a group of Oregon City business men who came to Salem on the first of a series of exchange visits. May is a former manager of the Portland chamber of commerce and cited the Kaiser shipyards as an example of what a chamber of commerce may do for a community.

Oregon City's plans for the future were outlined by the speaker who mentioned first the city elevator which the city plans to make a thing of beauty as well as a necessary piece of equipment.

"Never a day passes but some one comes to tell me something about the city elevator," May said of what is probably the best known thing about the town built on two levels which has its own peculiar problems.

Other items on the Oregon City agenda include a bus terminal and additional facilities which will make possible more nearly full use of available railroad service.

Carl Hogg, president of the Salem Chamber of Commerce and a former resident of Oregon City, presided and Charles A. Sprague introduced May.

Navy Police Take 2 Men

Robert L. Walker and Millard K. Blevins, who were arrested at Albany several days ago and charged with larceny, Monday were ordered turned over to navy military police in an order entered by Judge E. M. Page.

The order dismissed the charge against the two sailors, it being set forth that the district attorney had no objections and it was also specified that the youths make restitution for the monies allegedly taken.

A telegram was received from authorities at Puget Sound navy yard in which the court was informed the sailors were AWOL and had a balance of a courts martial sentence to serve. They also indicated they had no desire to have custody of the men until the civil court had taken what action it deemed necessary.

Court to Hear Seven Cases in Pendleton

Seven cases will be heard by the state supreme court which opens its fall term for eastern Oregon in Pendleton next Monday.

Most important of these cases is that of Hunter vs. Cuning, involving recovery of commission for the sale of timber lands. Plaintiff originally sued for $31,500 and received a judgment for $29,012.

Another case was filed by the Edward Hines Lumber company to set aside an assessment of additional excise taxes of $8284 imposed by the state tax commission. The lower court held for the tax commission, whereupon the plaintiff corporation appealed.

Other eastern Oregon cases for argument:

Rosch vs. Equitable Savings and Loan association, Cram vs. Tipper, Casper vs. Parker, Gossett vs. Von Egmond and McMullan vs. Roberts, et al.

Putnam Will Speak to PTA

Englewood Parent-Teacher association will hold its first meeting of the school year tonight at 8 o'clock, with Rex Putnam, state superintendent of public instruction, as guest speaker.

The program also includes Joe Brazie, Salem high school, who will play two piano selections.

Classrooms will be open at 7:30 p.m. so parents may inspect their children's work.

The school faculty will hold a reception immediately after the meeting. Refreshments will be served by the 6th grade mothers, with Mrs. Frank Caspell and Mrs. John Short in charge.

Mrs. Clarence Ferguson, membership chairman, will report on the membership drive, which began two weeks ago.

WU Planning Group Meets

The steering committee to develop plans in connection with Willamette university's campaign to acquire a $321,000 building program held an organization meeting here Monday. The committee will report back to the university trustees.

Committee members attending the session were Dr. G. Herbert Smith, university president; George Atkinson, San Francisco, and Robert L. Elstrom, Salem.

The university building program calls for a new men's dormitory, infirmary and three houses to be erected on the campus and leased to fraternities. Enrollment would be restricted to 800 annually during the next three years.

A new and larger athletic field also is proposed.
