CONFIDENCE IS CONTAGIOUS

It's the "know how" that counts

A LOVED one suddenly becomes ill—the overworked doctor is delayed in coming—you cannot get a nurse. Worried? There is really no need if you have taken a Red Cross Home Nursing course. Dispel your worries with the confidence that knowledge brings.

For worry makes worry. Worried parents can actually retard the recovery of a sick child by transmitting those worries and fears about the child's health to the patient himself. Similarly, confidence is contagious.

Red Cross Home Nursing courses are conducted by graduate nurses who teach simple sickroom techniques, show how to prevent the spread of communicable diseases, take temperatures, bathe patients, make them comfortable, and do the many other things necessary in the care of the sick.

Don't put this off... for your family's sake! Fill out the coupon below and mail it to your Red Cross chapter today. Class hours are arranged for your convenience.
