Today's Menu

If there are turkey leftovers, they will be served during the week end, but here are suggested menus:

- TODAY Lettuce chunks Thousand island dressing Meat sandwiches (Leftover turkey) Baked squash Guatemalan string beans Fresh fruits Cookies

- SUNDAY Avocado salad Meat loaf Browned potatoes Cauliflower with cream sauce Chocolate nut sundae Cake

- MONDAY Vegetable bowl salad Lamb chops Broiled peach halves Baked potatoes Buttered spinach Apple pie

GUATEMALAN STRING BEANS

- 1 can string beans 2 tablespoons bacon fat 1 onion, minced 3 tomatoes, chopped Generous dash cayenne pepper Salt and black pepper to taste

Melt the bacon fat in a skillet, add the onion and fry slowly until soft and yellow. Add the tomatoes and allow to cook slowly to sauce consistency. Season well and stir in the cooked string beans. Serves 4 to 6.

The custom of serving sherbets with the meat course is being revived with enthusiasm. Homemade sherbets or ices are easy to make and add much to the enjoyment of the meal. Apricot whole fruit nectar or juice makes a perfect liquid ingredient for the frozen mixture; the intense true fruit flavor is lasting and thoroughly delightful.

Mr. and Mrs. John Woodburn of Middle Grove have returned from a visit in Illinois and Iowa where they visited with friends and relatives for three weeks. This was the first visit to their home town in many years.

Mrs. Ray Crain (Julla Query) of Portland is spending the week end at the home of her mother, Mrs. Esther Query. She came down for the Thanksgiving holiday.

Out-of-Town Guests Here Thursday

Many out-of-town visitors were in the capital on Thanksgiving Day for family gatherings.

Clearing House for War Veterans Urged as Civic Need by YMCA Leader

Veterans are "not asking to be babied and we shouldn't baby them," Clair Johnson, metropolitan secretary of the Portland YMCA, told members of the Salem Council of Social Agencies and Marion County Social Workers club at a joint session at Schneider's Coffee shop Friday noon.

The advice followed Johnson's declaration that a foremost community project, already needed, is proper recognition of veterans' rights and requirements.

Communities must realize that men returning from fighting fronts or camp life are different from the men and boys who went away from home, he said.

"Passing the buck game has become the biggest civilian pastime in dealing with veterans," he maintained, urging every community to establish some clearing house to direct veterans to the agency or organization best fitted to aid them in their return to normal community living.

Younger and better educated, on the average, than the men who fought in World War I, men in this war have been away from home longer, have a better chance for recovery if wounded, but the chance of their being killed in action is more than twice as great as was that of the man in World War I, Johnson pointed out. By the end of this year, 14,300,000 men will have had experience in the armed services of this country. Surveys show that average age of men in the service is 25 years, and that only seven per cent of them may be expected to return to full time educational pursuits, he declared.

Use of the term psycho-neurosis in discharging men who have proved mentally or nervously incapable of continuing fighting has done such men a great dis-service because it is not understood, Johnson said, pointing out that such things as ulcers may send a man out of the service under that classification.

Johnson urged communities to include veterans on their committees planning for re-absorption of returning veterans, that the necessity for patience be recognized, and that no one make the error of classing all servicemen under any one type, although they may have had much the same experience.

The speaker reminded his audience, which crowded the coffee shop's dining room, that many veterans will return to civilian life with no job experience except that of the uniformed services, that they won't return as dreamy idealists, and that they themselves recognize the difficulties of the change from one type of life to the other.

Bauman-Selensky Wedding Tuesday

GERVAIS — Miss Mary A. Selensky and Albert J. Bauman were married at nine o'clock Tuesday morning at Sacred Heart church, Rev. Father Basil of Mt. Angel officiated. The bride, who was escorted to the altar by her father, Peter Selensky, wore a wedding dress of white slipper satin and a long white veil and carried a bouquet of gardenias, chrysanthemums and fern. Her maid of honor was her sister, Miss Clara Selensky and her bridesmaid, Miss Margaret Bauman, sister of the groom.

Miss Selensky's dress was peach-colored net and lace and Miss Bauman's dress was aqua net over taffeta. Both wore shoulder length veils and carried nosegays of chrysanthemums and fern. Little Rosie Schell, niece of the bride, as flower girl, wore a white satin dress, a white veil and carried a small nosegay similar to those of the bridesmaids.

Jack Nibler was the groom's best man and Steve Selensky served as usher. A wedding dinner was served at the parish hall for the wedding party and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Bauman gave a dance for their friends at the high school auditorium that night. They are now at home in the place Mr. Bauman bought this summer.
