'House' Plan Would Boost Highway Fund

R. H. Baldock, state highway engineer, said Monday that under a federal highway aid bill, approved by the house Thursday, Oregon would have available for highway construction during a three year postwar period approximately $45,000,000, as against $42,000,000 under a senate bill previously passed by that body.

Baldock, who just returned from Chicago where he attended the annual conference of the American Association of State Highway Officials, said the two bills virtually are the same with the exception that under the house measure no funds have to be expended for railroad grade crossing eliminations and the maximum that can be spent for that purpose is restricted to 15 per cent of the total. The senate bill provided that not less than 10 per cent of the total apportioned to the states should be expended for elimination of railroad grade crossings.

The state would match approximately $4,000,000 annually, for a period of three years, against the appropriation contained in the senate bill and $5,000,000 a year against the house bill appropriation.

"Most of the states are now drafting their postwar highway construction programs," Baldock said, "but final blue prints cannot be released until the federal government acts." Baldock predicted that the house bill, with some amendments, would be approved within a short time.
