MT. ANGEL—The Most Rev. Edward D. Howard, archbishop of Portland, conferred the Bachelor of Arts degree on the first class of Mt. Angel college and seminary to graduate under the new accelerated course at exercises held in the college auditorium Sunday afternoon, January 28.

Board Increases OCE Work Fields In Lower Division

MONMOUTH—The state board of higher education at its quarterly meeting in Portland, January 16, authorized the Oregon College of Education to grant the junior certificate, the lower-division certificate, and the associate in arts certificate to students who may wish to attend this institution for a two-year period, but who do not plan to take teacher training.

The junior certificate calls for a grade-point average of 2.0 and requires that courses be selected in line with a specified program for the freshman and sophomore years. This certificate will admit to junior standing at other colleges and universities. The lower division certificate is less rigid in its requirements and in general may be said to be provided for students who do not plan to pursue a full four-year course.

The associate in arts certificate has been authorized looking into the future to a time when definitely organized two-year curricula may be developed. At the present time no institution in the state has a curriculum leading to this certificate, but other states have such curricula, and it is probable that they will ultimately be developed here in Oregon.

In effect, this board action will open the doors of Oregon College of Education so that all high school graduates of this area may do two years of college work here whatever the field of study they wish to follow for the remainder of their college courses.
