Maj. Phil Brownell Completes Week's Observation Study

CAMP LEE, Va. - Maj. Phil R. Brownell, 335 State street, Salem, Ore., is one of $1 officers of the corps of engineers who today completed a week's observation study of the management and operation of Camp Lee's army service forces training center, the largest installation of the quartermaster

The officers, most of whom have returned from overseas assignments, visited all sections of the ASFTC, observed and discussed functions and actual work, and had the organization and key principles of training explained by Col. James H. Johnson, commander of the center.

Study here constituted the final phase of the officers' course in management of ASF training centers, preparing them for administrative and training assignments at other centers. The first seven at Fort Belvoir, Va.
