Seventeen states have passed the memorial to congress proposed by the committee on constitutional government calling for the constitution which would limit income and estate taxes to 25 per on this proposal is scheduled by a legislative committee this after-

I want to express my unqualified opposition to this amendment. It imposes a restriction which has no place in the fundamental law of the land. It represents an attempt on the part of its sponsors Bombers to freeze an idea into the constitution that might seriously hamper the congress in the financing of our government.

An amendment to the federal constitution is a far different thing than amending the state constitution. Here we can change our constitution with ease, either by submission of an amendment by the legislature or its initiation by the people and then a majority vote at an election. The machinery for amending the federal constitution is more cumbrous. So if this 25 per cent limitation is written into the constitution it could be removed only with difficulty.

The basis of the idea for the 25 in excess of that amount discourage initiative and may destroy private enterprise. It is also urged that during the 1920's the policy of reducing taxes really produced more revenues.

Granted that the idea be sound, that does not justify freezing (Continued on Editorial page)
