Inspects Extension Service—Domingos Pellegrino, assistant professor of agriculture at the University of San Paulo in Brazil, is a Marion county visitor. Studying 4H club organization, he spent Wednesday with James Bishop, county 4H club agent, visiting the youth organizations. This morning with Marjorie Tye, county home demonstration agent, he will again call in rural communities, and this afternoon will go into the field with Ben Newell, assistant in the extension setup here. While Brazil has agricultural organizations for the young people in its rural schools there is no over-all educational program for such groups, he said here Wednesday night. Rural school children in Brazil get three years of public schooling although city public and private schools run through high school years. There is a quite well-organized agricultural extension service in his homeland, the visitor said, but home demonstration agents serve cities and not rural communities.

Bennett Tells Rotary Value Of Scouting

"Every individual before he reaches the age of 21 has already lived 21 years and in that period he goes through boyhood, a distinct experience, and he is not just a little man," Frank B. Bennett, superintendent of Salem public schools told members of the Salem Rotary club at their Wednesday noonday meeting which was devoted to observance of Bay Scout week on the thirty-fifth anniversary of its founding.

"A boy is a boy in his own right," Bennett said, "and before he reaches manhood he has lived good, full and fruitful years. Many who do not know scouting think of a uniformed group of boys who take hikes, go into camps, create fire by friction. That is not scouting, it is only a art of scouting. Boys like hiking, firebuilding, merit badges and camping. Through development of these things, through scouting boys grows in stature.

"When we were a rural people boys had a chance to see animal life, bird life and plant life. When we became city dwellers the boys were divorced from the opportunity to enjoy the beauties of nature. Scouting takes them back, fills a void and develops traits which carry through to manhood."

Paul Jackson, former superintendent of Chemawa Indian school, now of Seattle, was a guest Wednesday. A. C. Nelson was introduced as a new member. The program was directly in charge of Lyle Leighton of the Cascade area council.

Several Scouts gave demonstrations of how the neckerchief, usually worn by members, can be utilized for many other purposes.

Senate Committee Informed Of Unemployment Benefits Accord by Labor, Industry

(See story page 1). Representatives of the AFL, CIO and employers' group Wednesday night sent the following notice of agreement to Sen. Lowell Wallace, chairman of the senate committee on labor and industries:

The undersigned, representing the Oregon State Federation of Labor (AFL), the Oregon State CIO Council and the Employers' Group, the latter speaking for various employers in the permanent and basic industries, desire to report to you that we have, over a period of several days sought to reach accord on the bills in your committee relating to unemployment compensation.

Our objective was to reach, if possible, an agreement on the provisions of all these bills, believing that if agreement were reached it would be in the public interest, and that it would materially lighten the work to be performed by the legislature. With that objective in mind, all participants conceded on different points. It would not be true to say that any signatory is fully satisfied with the result here reported. But influenced by a desire to maintain and extend the friendly employment relations that have existed in Oregon industry for a number of years, and as an evidence of our belief in the efficacy of collective bargaining as preferable to industrial and economic conflict, and its desirability rather than rule by government edict, each participant has yielded something in the interest of state unity and as an approach to a solution of the post-war problems which we anticipate.

We considered the proposals contained in Senate Bills 59, 74, 82, 136 and 143, and we request that your committee approve the following points:

1. That the waiting period be reduced from two weeks to one week (the subject contained in Senate Bills 59 and 74).
2. Extend coverage to all employees of an employer whose payroll in any quarter equals or is in excess of $100. This point is covered in Senate Bill 82.
3. Amendment of the disqualification provisions of the law as contained in Senate Bill 143, with the following amendments to the bill: Delete the words "attributable to employer" in line 21 of page

House Measure Designed to Bring In New Industries

A bill prepared by Rep. Warren Smith, Portland democrat, Wednesday for introduction in the house seeks to make Oregon more attractive to new industries by providing that federal corporate income taxes paid shall be deductible from the Oregon corporation excise tax.

Erwin said he did not know how much of a reduction in revenues would be experienced by the state because of such an offset, but that the measure would encourage new industries to locate in this state and that any loss would be only temporary.

FORWARD With the West

World's largest fluid type catalytic cracking unit

HERE IS A PARTIAL VIEW of Associated's new, multi-million dollar fluid-type Catalytic Cracking Plant just completed at Avon, California. Largest unit of its type in the world, this plant embodies all of this company's research and experience in big-volume aviation fuel production before and since Pearl Harbor.

Now pouring out aviation super-fuel for the Pacific battle fronts, this magnificent unit will—at the mere turning of a few valves—begin immediate production of new type, magically improved postwar motor fuel. Rushed to completion for war, it was engineered for peace as well. It was built without a penny of taxpayers' money, by western engineers and builders. After the war, manned by an increased number of western workers, this plant will be a source of finer motor fuels than you have ever used. * * Associated goes forward with the west.
