Down in Front Noisy Youngsters at Concert Climax Criticism of Front Row Gab Fest

When Adolph Busch, director of the musical group appearing at the Salem high school auditorium on Monday, stopped the musicians in the middle of a number, he started something.

For some years, those in charge of the Community concerts have found it necessary to have an adult near the front row, whose duty it was to keep the two or more rows of children under control. Monday night that unofficial proctor was away, and none was provided to take her place. The consequence was that the children made so much commotion that it was necessary for the director to stop the show, and admonish the children to be quiet so the musicians could play.

Some criticism of the director as "fussy" was heard, but surely anyone who has sat next to even a well controlled child knows that children do not keep still, or listen through the whole evening. The director sat facing two full rows of miscellaneous, entirely unsupervised children. He tried to play and direct, while many of the children whispered, wrote notes and even got up every few minutes and changed seats.

While many of the parents at low their children to go to the front because, they believe they are getting a better view, many of them (and I have heard it frequently) allow them to go because the themselves "can enjoy it more when the children aren't bothering them."

All who saw Adolph Busch after the concert say that they had never met a nicer, more easy-going man. And none better liked by his musicians. The musical group was happy, light hearted and uncomplaining although they had to take a bus to Albany after the concert because no accommodation were available in hotels here.

Also it was necessary for them to come from Portland on buses at various times from noon to six o'clock, because they couldn't all get on one. Their baggage came even later. The group had no room in which to rest, no place to practice and no baggage until the last minute.

With all this, the musicians were cheerful after the concert, they liked Salem and Oregon, and in many languages they bid the local management a gay goodbye as they boarded the bus for Albany late at night. (Of the 29 in the group, eleven nationalities were represented.)

Adolph Busch himself was the only one who expressed regret. He had never had to correct an audience before, and he felt embarrassed to do it. During the violin solo, he closed his eyes, trying to shut out the confusion in front of him, but when he was trying to direct the musicians he found concentration so utterly impossible that he had to stop the music.

Only admiration should be felt for Mr. Busch, it took nerve to do as he did.

This event is only the climax to other and smaller offenses against other artists.

Something will be done about the gathering of children on the front rows, it is only regrettable that those who really want to hear will have to suffer for that greater number who merely go to meet their friends socially and to chat through the long evening, unrestricted.

No parent can take offense. No criticism is directed toward children who behave themselves. Children who talk and laugh and take no interest in the programs are the ones who are to be corrected—and their parents should have no reason to feel hurt at criticism on their offending offspring.

Drummond, Mrs. Paul Bale, Mrs. Howard Barlow, Mrs. G. F. Chambers, Mrs. Gilbert and Mrs. Griffith.

Wonderful for Grown-Ups, Too!

Ever since they were tiny tots—when the Quintuplets catch cold—their chests, throats and backs are immediately rubbed with Musterole.

Musterole gives such blessed prompt relief because it's more than just an ordinary "rub." It's what so many Doctors and Nurses call a modern, considerate, relief-giving remedy for sore throat, aching chest muscles due to colds, makes breathing easier—but it actually helps break up congestion in upper bronchial tract, nose and throat.

And Musterole is so much easier to apply than a mustard plaster. White, Stainless. Just rub it on! "No Fuss. No Fuss with Musterole!"
