Esther Foster Opens Salem Salon Today

Smart in color, line and detail, a salon which carries simply the name of its owner, Esther Foster, opens at 260 North High street today from 2 to 7 p. m.

The natural-blond of the curved front exterior combines with plate glass and mirrored wall to provide the interior for the establishment. No displays will be arranged for the half-glass front, but will, instead be grouped as part of the decoration scheme for the spacious reception room.

Beige wool matting, colors of draperies and walls ranging from lemon through chartreuse to a deep forest green, with chairs of wine red and other red accessories shading off to rose brick have been used in the ultra-modern salon.

Long glass shelves which appear to hang from the ceiling have been arranged to screen the cosmetic bar from the street entrance and at the same time to serve a practical purpose—they hold items of the Alexander de Markoff toiletries line which Mrs. Foster will feature.

Costume jewelry, suits, dresses, millinery, hostery, blouses, sweaters, coats, robes, bags and handkerchiefs comprise the merchandise at Esther Foster's.

Miss Agnes Kirsch to Assist Training of Nurses' Aides

Employment of Agnes Kirsch, formerly on the Salem General hospital staff, as assistant to Mrs. Ernest Arneson, Marion county Red Cross head of nurses' aides and home nursing instruction, marks an increase in both types of classes, chapter officers revealed Wednesday.

Registrations for home nursing and nurses' aid classes has reached its highest peak to-date, it was said.

Nineteen home nursing classes have been started since last November. Three of these are completed. Enough women are now registered to begin two more classes next week.

Two home nursing classes held in the Red Cross classroom in Salem have completed the course. One was taught by Mrs. A. B. McLaughlan and one by Mrs. Ben Little. The first rural class to complete its instruction work was at Pratum, where Maxine Hartman and Mrs. Arneson taught. This was also the first class to have both men and women as students.

One of the two classes organized in Silverton is taught by Gladys Myers of Silverton and the other by Nova Young, Salem nurse.

Rural communities now holding home nursing classes include Keizer, Quinaby, Riverdale, Sunny-side, Brooks, Turner, Union Hill, Pringle, Chemawa and Middle Grove.

Two senior high school classes have been organized. Mrs. Mc-

College Must Be Kept Free Says Speaker

"Education must be kept free if it is to survive the crisis the world is passing through, but in keeping it free we must insist that religion and education be related." Rev. William H. Genne of Portland told members of the Salem Rotary club at their noonday meeting Wednesday in Hotel Marion. The speaker was introduced by Dr. R. Ivan Lovell of Willamette university, who announced the subject as "College Never Was Normal."

"A democracy," the speaker said, "demands an intelligent and morally trained citizenry. Colleges have never been able to fit college training into a mold. It will be more difficult the next five years to maintain the present status of campus life. Young men and women entering colleges face a crisis which is three-fold. They must stand on their own feet, away from the influence of home; they decide on their vocation and last, but not least, most of them select their life mate."

"With these changes taking place it is not difficult to see the task of the colleges. But in the next five years we will have children, fresh from high schools, whose parents have both been working in war plants. They will lack restraint. We will have young men and women who entered war work, delaying their education. They have been used to making money, spending it, and doing pretty much as they pleased. We will have our returning veterans of war service. These men have seen a lot of life and have become accustomed to doing, not as they pleased, the dictates of others. These two latter groups will be tossed in with the fresh high school group. This will create new problems."

"I believe, as do most Americans, that religion and state should be separated, but we must insist that education and religion be related in the schools. Pressure has halted many fine things in a lot of schools and we should thank God for schools like Willamette where religion is an integral part of college life."
