A Medford Hi Beef -And a Good One

Medford high school, well represented in the current tourney, has a beef, we're told, and wouldn't mind at all having the Oregon High Schools Activities associattion know about it. In fact MHS bosses may take it up with Secretary Tom Piggott & Co. It seems there's an OHSAA law which says something about no awards to high school athletes other than the traditionally known felt sig- Hennings, f net letters for their sweaters. Regardless of whether a prep team wins the state championship, as Medford's footballers did last fall, its players face an ineligibility rap if they're caught accepting other than the championship trophy and the mentioned letters.

And that's where Medford's beef comes in. Proud citizens of the southern city, not to mention a prouder school itself and Coach Al Simpson, want to give each of the football champs one of those practically valueless but deeply covet the last period, chalking up four ed gold football charms as tokens of Portland's five scores to give of their pride and appreciation. his team a 5-4 win over the Se-They'd even settle for giving the attle Stars in a Northern Division kids jackets with "State Champs" inscribed thereon. But the OHSAA law says nix in as many syllables, threatening ineligibility for the kids if such happens.

The law does drip in rather unfair proportions at that, wot? You'd think at least a few minor emendments could be made whereby deserving kids are rewarded with such really insignificant things as athletic sweaters or gold-plated charms. Things which shouldn't be measured in monetary values but in the pricelessness with which most kids will rerand 'em the rest of their lives.
