Potted Plant Sales Limited To Licensed

The state department of agriculture has issued a reminder that stores selling potted plants, violets, pansies, geraniums, or similar plants this spring are required under the state nursery law to obtain a dealer's license, cost of which is $10.

However, stores that sell only bedding plants, such as zinnias, marigolds, asters or vegetable plants do not need a license to conduct this business. License applications should be made to the department's division of plant industry in Salem or to the branch office in Portland.

Department officials report that the spring inspection of narcissus bulb plantings over the state is now under way. Under the Oregon narcissus bulb quarantine (No. 50) a spring inspection of plantings for bulb nematode is required to qualify bulbs for shipment this fall. Bulbs not inspected this spring may be shipped in the fall only after the proper hot water treatment as outlined by the quarantine.
