U. S. Must Cooperate, Says Brand

"Security of world peace depends in great measure in our taking a place in world affairs," Judge James G. Brand of the state supreme court, told members of the Salem Rotary club Wednesday noon in Hotel Marion.

"With a world war now being fought to a victorious conclusion," Judge Brand said, "the world is thinking of three things, peace, security and prosperity. If the past four years of war hasn't convinced us that not nation can live in isolation, alone among other nations, then we are past conviction."

"Our foreign policy must be one of strength and character. Our international commitments should be balanced by power. If we make world commitments we should be prepared to abide by them and enforce them, with force if necessary."

"There are two methods we may follow in world affairs, either defensive imperialism or union with other world powers to see that the world's peace is not breached. If we insist on having forfeited outposts through the world, seemingly for our own protection, then we must be prepared to see, for instance, Russia, insisting on outposts near our shores. Competition for these bases or outposts will sow the seed for the next war."

"If we, considered one of the big five in world affairs, join with other nations in a cooperative international peace organization, conceding when we must but always standing firm on policy we may see peace maintained. Unless this organization is firm in its decisions world peace will not obtain. We now have a court of international justice. More than 500 treaties exist. This court is supposed to be the agency through which disputes in these treaties are settled. It has no power."

Walter B. Minier was awarded a 20-year service pin by President Roy Harland. Minier, in turn, introduced Urlin Page, new member and a charter member of the club at Silverton.

Farm Worker Recruit Films Are Selected

Films to be used to recruit the 1945 army of boys and girls who will be called upon to stage the harvest battle for Marion county's food crop were selected Wednesday afternoon after a preview showing by Russell Adams, assistant state supervisor of emergency farm labor, before members of the local office, Frank B. Bennett, superintendent of Salem schools, Walter Snyder and Glade Follis of the Salem schools, the latter having had charge of the platoon work last year, and Mrs. Agnes C. Booth, superintendent of county schools.

After the films were selected Mrs. Gladys Turnbull, farm labor assistant, announced that applications would be accepted now for platoon leaders. She said she hoped to have many of the leaders of last year at work again this year.

She pointed out that boys and girls working under Follis last year had not only done a good

Law Officers Map Plans For Brake Testing

Law enforcement officers from Salem, Corvallis and Sweet Home met at the city hall here Wednesday afternoon to complete plans for their participation in the nationwide brake emphasis program scheduled to start April 15 and run till June 1, according to Chief Frank Minto, of Salem, who called the meeting.

The program is sponsored by the International Association of Chiefs of Police and is designed to focus public attention on the importance of maintaining adequate brakes in the interest of accident prevention and vehicle conservation.

Chief Minto of Salem, Chief Charles Devin of Corvallis, Chief H. L. Richards, of Sweet Home, and Capt. James Purcell, head of the traffic division of the Portland police, outlined plans for the conduct of the program in their cities. A general outline of the purpose of the program and an explanation of the procedure of the brake check was given by Sidney King, of the office of Robert S. Farrell, secretary of state, acting as representative of Chief Harry M. Niles, of Portland, state coordinator for the program.

Beginning April 15, law enforcement officers will join other officers in every town, city and state in the nation, in checking brakes on private passenger cars stopped in routine traffic enforcement activities. The check consists of placing a specially-design-

Interest Mounts in Program To Insure Future of Salem

Mounting interest in the program of the planning commission to insure Salem's future was reported by chamber of commerce directors and committee members at a luncheon yesterday noon in the Hotel Marion to check on the public response to the effort to provide funds with which to make the planning program a reality.

This increased interest was further evidenced by the scores of persons who yesterday visited the chamber of commerce to view the illustrative exhibits relative to the work of the commission on display in the organization's floral room. Among the visitors were a large number of persons from other cities who regard the Salem post-war planning program as an example for other communities.

Messages praising the scope and design of the Salem program have been received from numerous Oregon cities including Portland, Oregon City, McMinnville, Albany, Corvallis, Eugene, Independence, Dallas, Monmouth, Silverton and Newburg.

Among those who have viewed the exhibits at the chamber of commerce and studied the Salem long range planning program was a representative of Time, Life, Fortune and Architectural Forum.
