Old Clothing Drive Left Lads at Fire Station Shoeless

QUINCY, Mass. April 12 (AP)—The drive to collect old clothing for foreign relief left the lads at the Wollaston fire station shoeless today.

After the smoke-eaters kicked off their shoes, donned rubber boots and rushed out to a fire, collectors for the clothing drive arrived with a truck to get clothes deposited at the station for pickup. They grabbed the firemen's shoes, later, the firemen—struggling through piles of old clothes in the municipal garage—recovered their footwear.
