

New Agriculture Secretary Faces Job With Confidence In U.S. Future and Himself

By Ovid A. Martin
Associated Press Farm Editor

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP)—A man with full confidence in himself and with confidence in the future of the nation takes charge Monday as the nation's food chief.

He is Clinton P. Anderson, a six-foot New Mexico resident of Scandinavian ancestry whom the house of representatives to and war food administrator.

It is well that he possesses great confidence. The huge task ahead of him—that of relieving acute food shortages at home and of helping provide food for the hungry abroad—is, in fact, a task of defeating fear.

Fear Now Obstacle

Anderson and his colleagues on a house food shortage investigation committee have just returned from a tour of midwestern and far western food producing areas. I accompanied the committee and can report that a farmer fear of farm and food surpluses is standing in the way of maximum production.

This fear grows out of the memory of how over-expansion in farm production during World War I helped bring on a tragic agricultural depression.

It was a similar fear of surpluses—on the part of government food officials—that contributed heavily to present shortages. Thinking that the war in Europe would end last year, these officials quite understandably led farmers to cut back production.

"Abundant Production" Anderson told an audience of business men and farmers at Minneapolis, "is what the nation needs. There need be no fear of surpluses, now or in the future."

"Abundant production is the only sound solution to shortages, black markets, and inflated food costs," he added. The audience applauded loudly.

At Minneapolis Anderson told a small group of businessmen who entertained him at a dinner that he had been impressed by the tendency of farmers to vote republican at recent elections.

"There must be a good reason

Purcells on Eugene Trip With Family

CLOVERDALE — Mrs. A. E. Kunke and daughter Joyce accompanied her sister, Clara Purcell, and son Dick, to Eugene, Saturday. They will bring Purcell home with them. He works for the railroad and has been at Eugene for some time.

Marie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Sherman, has been confined to her bed for the past week and is still under physician's care. He has ordered her quiet for at least a week, as she is suffering from a complication of hay fever, asthma, and near pneumonia. She was picking strawberries at the time she became ill.

Mr. J. T. Norris will finish up the picking of his large strawberry acreage on Monday. He has had fine berries again this year and hauls them to the cannery at Woodburn.

Loretta Starr left Thursday morning with friends, for a trip to Los Angeles. Since her school came to a close she has been staying with her sister, Mrs. Nellie Hamilton.

for it," he said. "I'm going to find that reason and do something about it."

Two Cloverdale Women in Arizona For Vacations

CLOVERDALE — Edith Schifferer, who finished school at Willamette university last week, left Wednesday, with her sister, Mabel Jensen and small son, for Douglas, Ariz. Mrs. Jensen will meet her husband and remain while he is stationed there. Edith will stay for an undetermined vacation. They are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schifferer of this community.

Cloverdale Men Hosts at Meeting

CLOVERDALE — Farmer's Union met Thursday night at the school house. Carl Booth acted as president during the absence of Louis Hennies. This will be the last meeting until October because of the busy times during the summer months. The men were hosts at the end of the meeting and served ice cream and cookies for refreshments to the crowd composed mostly of women.
