Musicians on Monday's Bill

The Salem city band, appearing for the first time in several years in a concert in Willson park on Monday night, will be under the direction of Vernon Wiscarson and will include many well known Salem musicians and former service men.

The solo cornetists, Charles Pabst and Carl Armpriest, have been lead players in the city band for many years. William Backman, baritone player, served in the navy for 24 years and for the past eight years was director of a navy band. Maurice Brennen, first chair sousaphone player, is director of the Willamette university band and played several seasons in the Backman band at Grant park, Chicago, Roland De-Sart, first chair clarinetist, recently returned to civilian life after spending three years as first chair clarinetist in a navy band.

Roy Anderson, clarinetist, is a former music director at Monmouth and Independence and for the past year was assistant band director of an army band at Sheperd Field, Texas. Otto Bandel, clarinetist, was also a former army band director for many years.

Karl Thelen, French horn player, is director of the Leslie junfor high school band and orchestra, and Leslie Carson, first trombonist of the band, is at present director of the Parrish junior high band and orchestra.

Hop Crop Probably Will Fall Below Normal

INDEPENDENCE, July 14-(A)-This area's hop crop probably will fall below normal this year, growers said today.

Growers, reported early fuggles are lighter in most yards, and late hops are "spotted"-some above and some below average. They estimated a 10 per cent drop from 1944, despite new acreage.

Widely-Known Report Shows Varied Effect on Oregon Crops by This Summer's Prisoner Speaks High Temperatures, Rainfall

Hay, Cherries Profit by Dry Weather, But Berries, Cane Fruits Suffer; Prospect for Pears, Prunes Favorable; Nut Crops Lower

> By Lillie Madser Statesman Farm Editor

Crop prospects in general continued favorable through June in Oregon, and on July 1 the outlook pointed to a total harvest well above average and about equal to the favorable harvest of 1944.

Lack of rain throughout June and the unusually high temperatures in late June and the early part of July are, however, reducing prospects of some of the spring planted crops, particularly the late seeded grains. The dry weather also cut the strawberry crop and is adversely affecting the cane fruits, but it has been beneficial to cherries and the harvesting of an unusually large hay

The acreage for harvest of the primary field crops is not only above average, but also slightly larger than last year. Due to the abnormally heavy May rains, yields per acre quite generally promise to be better than average, though the yields of most spring planted grains are not expected to come up to last year.

Tree fruit prospects are favorable with total production expected to be a little larger than both last year and the average. In comparison with last year the outlook is for larger crops of Bartlett pears, sweet cherries and prunes in both eastern and western Oregon. Not much change The concerts will be played is indicated in the production of sour cherries, walnuts and filberts are in prospect. A large wheat crop was in prospect in Oregon on July 1, when probable production was placed at 24,695,000 bushels or 7 per cent larger than last year's crop of 23,105,000 bushels and 32 per cent above the 10-year period 1934-43. At the close of June some spring wheat, particularly late seeded, was showing the need of moisture. Washington and Idaho also expect wheat crops above last year and the average.

The production of feed grains such as corn, oats, barley and rye in Oregon this year is expected to be five per cent under 1944, about offsetting the increase in the wheat crop. While the acrerage of oats shows some decrease and that of barley an increase, the total acreage of feed grains is practically the same as last year. But yield prospects, although better than average, are not up to 1944, especially in barley and corn in western Oregon where much late seeding was Indications are that Oregon will cut 879,000 acres of tame hay this year or slightly more than acreage of all crops is the second 866,000 acres cut last year and the average of 872,000. An in- yields of most crops are well crease is also indicated in the acreage of wild hav which is placed at 242,000 as compared with 224,000 acres cut last year.
