

Bright World Dawning - - It's of His Making - - and He Asks So Little in Return

The man in uniform isn't looking backward to the battles he fought and the tragedy he has seen. He's looking forward--to the life of peace and security with his family which his sacrifices were meant to secure. He's looking forward to a good job and the opportunity for success which is every American's birthright. And in his bright new world will be a richer understanding of those with whom he works--of his neighbors--of his children's schoolmates. He'll be taking his family to the Church of their faith regularly too. Because "out there" under flying shells and flak he learned to re-evaluate the simple joys of home--of tolerance--and of prayer. All he wants of us for whom he fought, are help in reestablishing himself with his family; his old job back (or a better one); and the presence of friends and loved ones.

CHURCHES . . . where families of every faith can worship in freedom.

HOMES . . . where families of every income can live healthily, happily, comfortably.

SCHOOLS . . . where children of every race, faith and color benefit by progressive education methods.

INDUSTRIES . . . employing men and women of our community . . . producing for a constantly better way of life.
