Amateur Haas Winner

Nelson Victory Skein Stopped

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 20.–(AP)–Lord Byron Nelson's professional golf winning streak was stopped at 10 straight tournament victories here Sunday when amateur Fred Haas, of New Orleans, finished first in the Memphis invitational open with a score of 270 strokes, 18 under par and five less than his nearest competitor. Amateur Haas received $100 in war bonds for his victory.

Nelson finished in a tie for third with Harold "Jug" McSpaden at 276 and each received $1600 in war bonds. Dark horse Pro George Low, Clearwater, Fla., won top money in the pro field with a 275. He received $2667 in war bonds.

It was the first time in nine years that an amateur won a 72-hole tournament sponsored by the PGA.

PARTED: Bob Feller (left) and Walker Cooper (right) have been dubbed baseball's top battery of 1945 while pitching and catching for the Great Lakes naval team, but the combination has been broken up with Feller's discharge. He hopes to rejoin the Cleveland Indians this week. Cooper was the St. Louis Cards' backstop before he joined the service.

Warriors Bop Oaks, Angels

FORT LEWIS, Aug. 20-(AP)-The Fort Lewis Warriors proved themselves a seemingly unbeatable team today when they won their 29th and 30th straight without a defeat in beating the Oakland team of the Pacific Coast league, 11 to 3, and later taking on the Los Angeles Angels to the tune of 5 to 3.

In the afternoon game with the Acorns, the Warriors made five runs in the first inning with a homer by Gale Bishop.

In the evening game with the Angels the going for the Warriors was a trifle harder. They drew first blood in the second with three runs, with Los Angeles tying the score in the third, both clubs getting four hits to make the three runs.

Lipscomb-Dusette Title Brawl at Armory Tonight

It's knuckling down time for the grapplers tonight in the Ferry Street Garden's rumpus room as Lantern-jawed Jack Lipscomb and his coveted title belt goes against Frenchman Georges Dusette in a Coast junior heavyweight championship brawl. And brawl is right. The card's top go is expected to be a lulu all the way, for it was from Dusette himself that Lipscomb won the title a few weeks ago in Portland. That particular offering was classed with the all-time Rose City biggies and little says tonight's reunion will bore the blood 'n thunder loving customers.

Mustachioed meanie Lipscomb, who does his training as a bouncer in a Eugene suds parlor, culminated a comeback try after a lengthy absence in the easy by lifting the championship from likeable strongy Dusette. Accounts of the tussle tell that Lipscomb simply and literally battered his way to the win while ducking Dusette's famed full nelson big squeezes. It was a case of orthodox power against rassiin's roughy-toughy stuff and the latter won out. The rematch should offer the same menu, which is always pleasing to the majority of grappling clients.

The prelims offer two newcomers against each other and popular and improving Tex Hager opposite Canadian Ed Potvin. The two newies are "Gorilla" Pogi, the hairy gent who made a shortened debut here last week in the elimination tournament and Marty Petroff, a Russian character advertised as a cleanie. Although Pogi was eliminated in his short session a week ago, he displayed reasons to believe he's another of the roughy-toughy species. Potvin isn't exactly a fair-haired rassler either.

The party begins at 8:30 p.m. and Sailor "Prof" Newton, who has been doing an okeh job of it in recent weeks, is the referee.

Army-Navy Go To Philadelphia

Classic Moved to Massive Stadium

WEST POINT, N. Y., Aug. 20–(AP)–The army-navy football game, which held its place as the nation's No. 1 gridiron spectacle during three war years when it was kicked around more than the ball, will return to a big-time setting in Philadelphia's massive municipal stadium this year.

Col. Lawrence "Biff" Jones, army graduate manager of athletics, announced today that the game, tentatively listed for West Point's Michie stadium, would be played in Philadelphia, Dec. 1. The move to Philadelphia follows the recent relaxation of sports travel restrictions and fulfills a long-term contract between the service academies and the Quaker City stadium.

Legion Honors Baseball Kids

Over 60 Juniors Lauded for Season

Capital Post No. 9, American Legion, opened its doors to over 60 representatives of Salem junior baseball championship teams last night at Legion hall, and during the totally impressive "Baseball Nite" meeting presented each lad with an emblem denoting his successful season.

Legion Post Commander B. E. "Kelly" Owens and Post Athletic Chairman Oliver B. Huston were in charge of the lively session. W. H. "Bill" Klepper, general manager of the Portland Beavers and his assistant, Bill Garbarino were special guests. Mr. Klepper gave an interesting talk concerning the recent Portland-Salem baseball tieup and commended the city's junior baseball program as one of the finest he has heard of in his many years' association with the game.

Members of the Post's Junior Legion team were presented with handsome blue jackets trimmed in gold and bearing the American Legion emblem. Players representing the Eagles Lodge, Clough-Barrick and Olinger playground teams were recipient of ribbon awards. Coaches Ralph Caley, Tommy Drynan, Bob Keuscher and Al Lightner gave short talks in behalf of respective teams.

The Howard Maple permanent trophies, to be awarded championship teams each year, were also presented. Fathers of the players were present and introduced in a body. Special awards were given Roger Dasch, Ralph Hammack and Bill Ready for batting achievements during the summer.

Mr. Klepper issued an invitation to all attending juniors to be his guests at the Portland-Los Angeles game Saturday night in Portland, which was acclaimed and accepted. He also challenged the Clough-Barrick champs to come play his "Park Rats" soon in Portland. The challenge was quickly accepted by Sponsor Dr. L. E. Barrick and Coach Keuscher.

Shortie sporties: Athlete to watch on the long road back, Don Kirsch, Oregon's basketball-baseballer of pre-war days. Soft-spoken Donnie, a bearcat on a basketball court despite his pee-wee size is to take over the head coaching job at Hillsboro next winter. He was shot up rather badly in Normandy action shortly after D-Day and is still subject to slight paralysis now and then in one arm and leg . . . Tony Fraiola, another ex-athlete who came near checking out with a serious stomach ailment a year ago is about to embark on a coaching career of his own, too. Although it isn't for public consumption yet, Tony has come up with a jim-dandy of a job. Incidentally, he applied for coaching work in the Salem system but says he was turned down but flatly. Which turned out to be a fine break, for Anthony says he'll get much more pay in the new setup than he would have at SHS. . . . Speaking of coaches, Lt. Harold Hauk of the Viks answers queries as to his status now that the war is over. He doesn't think he'll be discharged for two or three months, too late for football but quite possibly just in time for basketball. Such would erase a difficult situation at the Villa, for Frank Brown is known to have tendered his resignation as Villa hoop boss . . . The Cascade league's Snellstrom Braves lived up to their nickname the other night in Eugene. They played a GI "all-star" team which was in reality the Fort Lewis Warriors—Bill Fleming, Don Dallesandro, Danny Litwhiler, Frank Kelleher, Don Johnson, Ford Mullen, Hank Camelli & Co. Oh well, most nines along the coast aren't brave enough to even challenge the Warriors . . . Attention Mr. B. Klepper, Portland Beavers: Best looking kid catching prospect we've seen the last few years is one Dick Rodiger, 18-year-old who backstopped for Eugene high last spring. He's a Cascade leaguer now, is developing into a swelegant receiver, swats the ball hard and often, can run, hustles in plenty, loves the game and carries a peep-sighted .30-.30 for a right arm. Sneak up on him some time and take a look . . .

Local Fans Sure There IS a Santy Claus

Voice of the people dept: It took awhile for it to sink in (mebbe the shock was too much for 'em), and the natives are still rubbing eyes and scratching noggins after realizing George Norgan & Co.'s Portland Beavers paid Mrs. Geo. E. Waters & Co.'s Salem Senators what adds up to $60,000 for becoming a full-fledged member of the Lucky Lager brew family. The purchase ticket in the recorder's office reads $35,000 down, with $25,000 more to go on the installment plan.

Little wonder the natives are stunned. Sixty-thousand is regarded roundly as the sum for which the 25th and Turner plant was constructed, lock, stock and light poles, five years ago. Of course operational costs during the club's three years in action (it lost money and close to $10,000 worth during the 1942 campaign alone) dug a deeper hole in the Waters bank account. If figures were available on exactly how much the Salem Senators cost since birth we're sure the total would dwarf the $75,000 level. But the point which dumbfounds John Q. Public is that Mrs. W. now gets $60,000 of it back, and for something which at one time brought a top offer of $15,000 from a major league club.

Consequently, the natives who are only too happy to chew over such rarities are to a man convinced Mrs. W. should never doubt the personage of Santa K. Claus from now on. Most aren't reluctant to believe the Beavers will make the investment pay off in time through developments of future players, however. Some day the Portlands will peddle a Salem-reared ballgamer for sixty grand, and that alone will balance the up to now expensive budget.

Locals Love Their Beavers, All Right

Do the locals love their Portland Beavers? What would you think if you were stopped exactly 10 times within three blocks by smiling natives who offered as their morning salutation such as: "Boy, how about them Beavers last night! They sure put it on the Oaks, huh? And Seattle lost, too. Hot dawgee!" . . . So it goes almost any day (after a win the night before, of course) you saunter down the boulevards. The Portlands had best win that pennant. If they don't, the locals will run competition to the Japs in the hara kari department . . .

Stamp of a major league slugger: Danny Litwhiler, the Cardinal clouter now with Fort Lewis, whacked four straight batting practice serves over the Eugene stadium's left field wall Saturday night, all the pokes soaring near the 400-foot mark. Incidentally, he parked another terrific wallop into right-center in the first inning for a counting homer off one Larry Susee. Ex-Salem Legion twirler Susee was a soft touch for the Warriors, but Bud "Cocky" Brewer stopped 'em with only one run in the three heats he worked and whiffed Dom Dallesandro, Frank Kelleher and Mickey Burnett in succession in the eigthth inning!

In case you haven't heard, the Warriors beat the Cascade league team 11-6, St. Louis Browns' Pitcher Chuck Cronin winning his 76th game against one loss since firing for the GI's. But after witnessing the batting barrage given in support of Cronin we're convinced your daughter could win at least 40 games for the Warriors. You should see those gents hit!

On Saturday the team will accompany some 40 other lads in acceptance of the Klepper invitation.
