Alley Captures Salem Tourney

Fall Tournament to Be Handicap Affair

Lawrence "Monk" Alley's net 65, carded Saturday when he toured the 18 holes in 71 strokes, held up through Sunday play to win him first place in the Men's club weekend Sweepstakes tournament at the Salem golf course. Alley led 32 entrants across the finish.

Three linksmen tied for second with net 68s. Lloyd Davenport's 73-5-68, J. W. McCallister's 76-8 -68 and Glenn Burright's 84-16 -68 gained the place finish. Two more, Bill Schaefer at 77-8-69 and Roger Putnam at 74-5-69 tied for third.

The club tournament committee has decided that the annual fall tourney will be a handicap affair this season. Qualifying rounds will start in the next week or two, according to Don Hendrie, and players in the tourney will use three-fourths of respective handicaps in match play.

He in turn had a lesson by mail from an army brass hat who probably attended one of the Beaver games at Portland. Seems Mr. K. was asked to teach his park attendants the proper way of masting Ol' Glory. They lofted the huge slag slowly and in perfect time with the rendering of the National Anthem over the PA system. Which is wrong. The brass hat informed that the flag

A Fib to Call Village 'Poor Ball Town'

Have you been noticing lately how much harder it is to call to owners and members of the the village a poor baseball town? No question but what the premises earned the 4-F status when the golden era of softball melted away in the late 1930s. Waters park virtues do not include the attraction and Jerry Myers secretary. Other of space-filling clients, and only thrice that we remember were the park's pews pleasantly filled. One of those times everybody got in free.

There have been no instances worthy of packing 'em in of late and, therefore we might be asked on what we base our conviction. Merely this: The combined efforts of the local Legion post and business men who sponsor the 17 junior ball teams, not to mention the six more produced by the city playground men, cannot have helped but make the village and surrounding areas baseball conscious.

Practically every day you read of the post-season banquets and accolades heaped on the juniors by these same and quite proud sponsors. A number of the sponsors have included on the honoring list fur-lined jaunts to Portland to watch the Beavers play, trips the kids will never forget. Also, the Legion lined up two special bus loads of city champions for a similar excursion Saturday night, and Vancouver. Bostick, Washington Ore., Sept. 13 and 14, Tom Olsen, approximately 50 kids made that trip.

These same kids, most of whom are already looking forward to 6-4, 1-6, 7-5. Will Tanner of Port- ciation, said today. Glen McCor-1946 baseballing, talk of little else around home and respective land took the junior girls' clay mick, Salem, heads the Oregon neighborhoods. It's the greatest advertising in the world for baseball court title, in Salem.

Consequently, it's rather easy to predict the town is well on its way to becoming anything but a poor baseball villa. The baseball marriage between the local Legislator and Portland's Beaver isn't exactly detrimental either.
