Lions Club Told War-Trained Dogs No Pets

No matter what the "detraining" program may be, Ted Borkman, Salem lumber dealer who helped the marine corps train its dogs of war, would not "take as a gift" one of the attack dogs he helped to prepare for south Pacific combat.

Some of those dogs had cost their owners as much as $1600 and association with them proved to Borkman that they have earned the "man's best friend" description. But, accidentally, in years to come some slight injury or unintended insult may remind such a dog of the education given by the marines, Borkman told the Salem Lions club at its Thursday noon luncheon meeting at the Marion hotel.

Attack Dog The Doberman pinscher has 600 pounds of pressure in his jaws and, trained as an attack dog, will grasp either right wrist or throat and refuse to let loose until ordered to relax his hold, Borkman said.

The German shepherd, which the speaker believes a little inferior to the Doberman in ability to grasp training, isn't far behind when it comes to grasping human flesh; it averages 520 pounds of jaw pressure. The shepherd takes the south Pacific climate better than the Doberman, but the two breeds were found to be superior to others for attack dog uses.

An attack dog is essentially a hunter—with a human being as his game. He is able to smell a man 600 feet, to hear him 400 feet away and to tree him or hold him otherwise until his handler arrives to finish his job, Borkman said. The speaker credits attack dogs with saving many lives and with otherwise helping win the war in jungle areas where camouflage made tracking down the enemy an almost impossible piece of work for men alone.

Borkman pointed out that he was speaking only of attack dogs that he helped to train at Mare Island ammunition dump. Dogs trained for sentry duty also were useful, but received other education and may be more easily rehabilitated, he suggested.

The Rev. Homer Leisy will officiate at the services assisted by the Rev. W. A. Backer. Concluding services will be held at City View cemetery.

Parking Meter Case Reviewed

The state supreme court heard arguments Thursday in a suit to eliminate parking meters in Portland, as well as in all other Oregon cities which have them.

James Hickey, plaintiff in the suit against Mayor Earl Riley and other Portland officials, contends that the ordinances providing for the meters subject motorists to imprisonment for debt, are class legislation, are revenue measures instead of regulatory measures and grant the city the right to rent the streets. Circuit Judge Franklin C. Howell held that the meters are legal and Hickey appealed to the supreme court.

Publicist

Gil Lieser, scheduled to be discharged from the navy, has been appointed director of publicity for Willamette university.

Lieser Named As Director of WU Publicity

F. G. (Gil) Lieser, graduate of Willamette university in 1942 and since an officer in the naval reserve, has been appointed director of publicity for the school, announced President G. Herbert Smith last night. Lieser will assume duties on a full-time scale starting September 25.

The new publicity director, who after quitting a current 45-day leave will be discharged from the service, acted as a part-time publicity man while attending the university. Dr. Smith opined Lieser would prove a valuable addition to the school's administration in his full time capacity. Lieser was in the city this week attempting to locate living quarters for his wife and himself. The former WU tennis player is at present a lieutenant, junior grade, in the navy and has seen 17 months' service in the Pacific theatres. It is expected he will handle all angles of Willamette publicity, including athletics. He did considerable work in athletic publicity while attending the school. His home is in Seattle.

Fat Stock Sells Far Above Market Prices at Marion, Polk 4-H Club Show Here

The reserve champion fat lamb shown by Wanda Banick of Brooks at the Marion-Polk 4-H show brought $2 cents a pound and was purchased by Swift and Company; Harvey Elser of Turner sold his blue ribbon crossbred lamb for 60 cents a pound to Sears Roebuck. The other 12 fat lambs sold for from 23 to 45 cents a pound while the 15 lambs averaged 45 cents a pound, four times the market price.

Wayne Goode's crossbred fat hog sold for 80 cents a pound to Sears and the other 13 hogs sold for from 29 to 37 cents, the 15 averaging 44 cents, compared with the market price of less than 16 cents.

Jimmie Gilson of Prairedale, Polk county club, topped the beef prices when his grand champion Hereford sold to Sears for 61 cents a pound. Floyd Fox, jr.'s grand champion crossbred fat steer sold to Sears for 60 cents a pound. Fox is a Silverton club boy.

Swift & Co. Buys Swift and Company bought all of the reserve grand champion animals. Wanda Banick of Brooks had the reserve champion lamb, Robert Beutler of Salem, had the reserve champion hog, and Bob Bannick of Brooks, and David Stump of Monmouth had the reserve champion fat steers.

Margaret Stump of Monmouth fed her steer well, sharing her choicest apples with him, Russell T. Daulton, Polk county club leader said in introducing her. Her winning smile encouraged bidding until she ended with 36 cents a pound for her crossbred steer which placed fifth in Polk. It was knocked down to Sears just before a bid from Safeway was received. Gene Vandendynde, Sears manager, said he would yield to the higher bid for the sake of the girl and so Safeway was declared buyer. Sears Takes 10 Lots Swift was the leader in number of purchases taking 13 lots; Sears took 10 lots; Valley Packing company and Midget Market took six each; Schroeder's market and Safeway took three each, and one each was purchased by Ladd and Bush branch of the United States National, First National, Paramount market, Hogg Brothers, Harry Scott and Ronald Jones.

H. C. Seymour, state club leader, and L. J. Allen, state livestock leader, were here from Corvallis for the sale. New Shop Foreman—New shop foreman for Oregon Motor Stages is R. J. Davidson, who has come to Salem from Eugene, where for the past two months he was with the company. Prior to that he was located in Sacramento. Mrs. Davidson and their two sons are here seeking a place to live.
