

Returning Servicemen to U. S., Payment to Jobless Fill Congressional Minds

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Problems of peace—payment to the jobless and getting the boys back from war—were fighting subjects for congress today.

They shaped up like this:

1. Unemployment pay. President Truman said he still wants his original $25-26 weeks plan. Supporters have their doubts he will get it. It was rejected in committee. The senate will battle the subject out on the floor starting Tuesday.

2 Men Held on Robbery Count

Charles Delano and Joe Uhrig were in the county jail Monday on a joint charge of robbery with bail at $3000 each, for the alleged theft of $1082 in checks and $400 cash from Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Handy, who operate a mercantile store at Woodburn.

Delano was also being held on charges of burglary and larceny of an automobile. Reports from the district attorney's office said that Delano held up the couple on their way home from the store Saturday night, took the checks and money and after locking the pair in a fruit room, made his getaway in their 1941 Studebaker. En route to Portland, he picked up Uhrig, who had helped "case" the job.

The Handys were released from the room by their hired girl, and police notified. Delano and Uhrig were apprehended in Portland with the car and money, and returned here Monday.

From Mortuary to Restaurant

This French provincial building set in spacious lawn at 2650 S. Commercial st., at the south edge of Salem has been purchased by Michael (Mickey) Flax, who announced Monday that he expected to add from $25,000 to $30,000 in equipment to his $37,500 investment and to establish a fine restaurant there.

Roselawn Funeral Home to Be Converted to Restaurant

Denying that he had ever planned or would plan to operate a night club there, Michael (Mickey) Flax on Monday announced he had purchased the Rose Lawn Funeral home at 2650 S. Commercial st., and late this fall would reopen it as a first class restaurant.

Persons who sent a remonstrance to the Marion county court over establishment of what they understood was to be a night club had been misinformed, Flax maintained. He paid $37,500 as purchase price and will invest another $25,000 to $30,000 in modern equipment, he said.

The French provincial structure, built six years ago, is equipped with a good pipe organ, he said, and there would be music during the dinner hour. Flax said he also planned to bring in good small orchestras for dancing, but that there would be no floor shows or night club atmosphere about the place. A catering service for homes and private dining rooms will be featured.

Flax said that he would plan to bring in a fine chef, but if he found none available would himself oversee preparation of the food. Former chef at the Flamingo, Miami Beach, Algonquin and New York hotels, he has also served as chief steward for the Vanderbilt yacht "Normahall" and for Andrew Mellon's "Corsair."

He has recently returned from his second period of service with the marines, having been with them during the first World War. To Plan Decorations

With Mrs. Flax and their young son, he plans to make his home in an apartment at the new restaurant. Mrs. Flax, interested in interior decoration, will plan the interior of the establishment.

Purchasers of Reservoir Property Describe Plans Before Salem City Council

In spite of an argument which centered on small details of the city's sale of the old reservoir site and which occupied a good 40 minutes of the session, Salem city council ran through a variety of business Monday night. (See page 1).

Carl Hogg and Elling Halvorson, purchasers of the reservoir block, explained to the council that they proposed to fill in the reservoir hole and to build their own residences on the west half of the property. Hogg said after the meeting that he would probably build next year.

Halvorson said they had never intended to purchase the strip of property which goes with the block from the vacation of Lincoln street in 1925, but if they had it they would plan to keep it a secret. Both men said they were sure they could agree with George Putnam on a means of leaving his garage where it is (it stands in that strip of Lincoln street territory which is included in the deed they will be issued), declaring that just as important to them as the view would be the goodwill of their neighbors.

But the questions flew concerning the wording of the description, whether the city could sell the Lincoln street land, why it should or shouldn't keep it as a street, etc.

To Vacate Streets

However, the council did find time to: Take first steps to vacate streets and alleys west of the west line of 16th street in Condit's addition, where Keith Brown and associated plan for industrial construction, and to vacate the alley in block 14 of University addition, where the Deaconess hospital plans to build.

Set November 5 as date for the hearing into a change of zone from class 1 residential to class three business for lots 1 and 2 of the Devers addition and lots 1-1- and 17-19 inclusive of Rosedale addition, where the city school system has purchased property and plans to establish a playground.

Students Asked To Continue Harvest Work

Public school boys and girls who have been working in the crop harvest were being encouraged by school authorities today to remain on the agricultural job the remainder of this week.

Following a meeting with farm labor office personnel, Supt. Frank B. Bennett said the schools would cooperate in urging those already working to remain at work. Others who have not been so employed will be encouraged, he said, to assist with the crops after school hours and on Saturday.

Growers who were appealing for more help Monday said that they would come by the schools after 3:30 p.m. if such a schedule could be arranged between school principals and the farm labor office.

Ralph P. Laird, labor assistant at the office, reported that of the 39 farmers who called for workers Monday morning, 16 were turned away with no help available for their crops. Since the canners have completed processing their present stocks, the prune harvest is especially urgent.

Mrs. H. H. Palmer of the Rose-dale district, whose husband is with the army in Texas, said that she had been only able to secure nine pickers to harvest a 60 acre prune crop. Other growers told similar stories.

Other jobs are available at the office, such as pulling onions, beets and cutting celery. One man told Laird that he has 2000 crates of celery that must be cut within a day or two or he will lose the entire crop. There is also some bean picking in the Woodburn area.

Crisis Faced By Canneries

Because the first week of school came just at the peak of the prune harvest, canneries of the Salem area are having their greatest crisis of the season this week, the canners' committee said Monday.

If office and store employees will join victory shift workers this week and housewives and unemployed men and women will aid on daytime and all-night shifts for the next five or six days, the biggest problem faced by food packers here will be solved, William Linfoot, the committee's chairman, declared.

Establishments in special need of help today he listed as United Growers, Hunt's, Blue Lake, Starr, Allen's and Oregon Fruit Produce.
