Householders Yearn for Fruit Trees During Autumn Season

By Maxine Buren Speaking solely from the standpoint of an amateur, I'd like to suggest that householders take a lesson from the neighbors' heavily

Laying no claim to being a garden expert, I do insist that now is the season for doing something about it. Whether or not it is according to the rules of landscape architecture, an apple tree looks sort of homey and old fashioned and practical when growing in the back yard. Especially if the tree is a gnarled old apple tree that looks like generations of children may have swung on its lower

An apple, pear or plum tree comes in mighty handy at this time of year too.

Now if I were choosing one apple tree for my back yard I would select an early winter good-keeping variety. I would close my eyes to the fine flavor of the Gravenstein or the early transparent. I would select a Spitzenberg (and would find that it is hard to grow pest-free) or select a Rome Beauty, a grand sooker and good keeper, or other of those crisp all-round varieties. I would, perhaps, persuade my next door neighbor to plant a Gravenstein so I could enjoy that wonderful sensation of eating one of the season's first apples. The early apples are poor keepers, and therefore often go to waste for want of enough demand.

The Bartlett pear is the most highly honored of all pears, because it is so good for canningbut oh my, the flavor of some of the later varieties, Comice or D'Anjou are long to be remembered, and long to be enjoyed too, because they keep for months under proper conditions.

The D'Anjou, by the way, keeps away into March, if you have facilities to store properly. Further taking our life in our hands, let's talk about plums. Years ago the family gardener used to bring us plums from a certain tree in his back yard each fall. Never, thought our family, was there such fruit. Its memory still remains, and until a year or so ago, so did the tree,

Breakfast Opening Event

Around tables Decked with fall flowers and fruits, in the banquet hall of the Quelle cafe, members of Salem Business and Professional Women's club gathered Sunday morning to honor their president, Miss Ida Mae Smith, and to open informally the Salem observance of National Business Women's week.

The singing of a favorite hymn of Miss Smith's and an invocation by Miss Laura Hale opened the breakfast program over which Mrs. Arthur Weddle presided. Mrs. Effie Arehart and Miss Martha Fischer, accompanied by Mrs. Jessie Bush Mickelson, sang, and Miss Elda Dodrill paid tribute to Miss Smith for her ambition and skill, her charm and humility and her influence on the teaching profession of the state. Miss Smith is assistant professor of elementary education at Oregon College of Education.

Women doing other types of work may well look to the teaching profession to learn why women have almost monopolized positions in that field once held by men, Miss Isabel Childs, city editor of The Statesman, maintained, as she spoke on "The Keys of the City." Women teachers give generously of their time to the job; they are more interested in the product than the paycheck and they carry the idealism of the school room over into their daily lives, she declared. Women today hold the keys to the city; they have earned them by work and by paying "tribute to the King," but they seldom turn the keys to unlock what may be found behind the walls, the speaker said, expressing also the hope that women may add no more bricks to the walls which threaten to rise, dividing the people of the United States into classifications of race, color and creed.

Mrs. Mickelson led the group singing, with Mrs. Emily Howard as accompanist, Miss Helen Fletcher was chairman of arrangements for the breakfast. Miss Phebe McAdams, last year's president, is general chairman of the club's activities for

Now 2 Points FOR USED FATS

Help Increase Supplies of Soap and Other Peacetime Products By Saving More Used Fats

Industrial fats far short of last year! We are almost down to the bottom of the barrel. The nation's industrial fat supply is millions of pounds less than it was in 1944. We need fully as much as last year to help make the soaps and other civilian goods you want and need so badly. So . . :

If you want more seap and soap flakes ::. if you're dreaming of nylons, sheets, cotton fabrics and want them to hurry back to the store counter . . . you can help by saving those used kitchen fats as you never saved before! Save every drop, every day!

These fats are vitally necessary to help speed greater supplies of soaps and hundreds of other things-like new cars, electric washers, irons, refrigerators and tires. Industry must have these fats :: to help get to you more quickly the peacetime products you've been longing to have for yearst

So skim and scrape and scoop just as you did so faithfully before V-J Day. It is a peacetime job now-a job that will help you. And to prove how important it is, your government has increased the point bonus. So help meet this nation's need by con-tinuing to save used fats.
