

State Publicity Coordination Asked by Snell

GEARHART, Oct. 22-(P)-Gov. Earl Snell recommended to the Oregon Coast Highway association tonight that Oregon's tourist advertising programs be coordinated under a single state agency.

Predicting that the state's tourist industry, which amounted to $51,000,000 in 1941, would be vastly increased, the governor said a more effective job could be done if the state could obtain coordination of the tourist promotion programs which now are sponsored by the state highway commission, road associations, chambers of commerce and other agencies.

He urged greater emphasis on advertising, dissemination of the tourist information to Oregon citizens so they can help do the job; development of special tours, expansion of tourist accommodations and facilities, and development of programs of roadside beauty, parks, stream purification and conservation of natural resources.

The governor, after pointing out that travel has been restricted for the past four years, said: "There is now a tremendous pent-up desire on the part of the masses of our people to travel, to go, to see, to vacation. They will travel in such numbers as to dwarf into insignificance all the tourist business of past years, both in numbers and in dollars."

Governor Snell also recommended the development and promotion of special events and attractions, such as the Pendleton round-up, Portland rose festival, Eugene Oregon trail celebration, Astoria regatta, Waldport salmon derby, Oregon caves, Crater Lake, Timberlake lodge, the Willow wonderland, and scores of others.

He said the highway commission would spend $200,000 next year to advertise tourist attractions, double the amount the commission has ever spent in one year for this purpose.

Services for Mrs. Paulus Planned Today

Services for Mrs. Elizabeth Paulus, 77, who died Sunday afternoon at a Salem hospital, will be held at St. Joseph's Catholic church today at 10:00 a. m. Her six sons will be pallbearers at the services.

Mrs. Paulus came to Oregon in 1886 from Germany to be with her uncle, Charles Gies, near the Fairgrounds. In January, 1888, she was married in Portland to Christopher Paulus, who died in Salem in 1935. She and her husband invested heavily in downtown business property, which is still in the possession of the family.

Six sons were born to the union, all of whom are widely known business men in Oregon. They are: Robert, George, and William Paulus, who operate the Paulus Bros. cannery here; Fred, chief deputy state treasurer, Otto, a Salem attorney and Theodore, who operates the Ted Paulus Valley Hardware company of Grants Pass. A number of relatives in Germany also survive, as does a cousin, Carl Gies of Salem and a niece by marriage, Mrs. Carl W. Shumacher of Portland.

Mrs. Paulus was a member of the Catholic church and attended church regularly at St. Joseph's Catholic church.

Concluding services are private and will be held at Mt. Crest Abbey mausoleum. Recitation of the rosary was held Monday night at the Clough-Barrick chapel.

Arguments of attorneys were heard in the Marion county circuit court here Monday in the case of F. H. Young, Oregon Business and Tax Research, Portland, attacking the validity of a 1945 legislative act providing a short state income tax form. The case was filed against the state tax commission.

Young contended that the bill signed by Gov. Earl Snell was not the one approved by the legislature. It was expected that the proceeding would be appealed to the state supreme court regardless of any decision that is handed down in the lower court.

Printing of the short forms by the tax commission is being delayed pending a final decision in the case.

Fraternities to Seek Pledges At Willamette

Representatives of Willamette university's three fraternities announced Monday that the chapters will resume pledging with the opening of the new semester, October 25, after a two-year suspension necessitated by the war.

While the small number of men students anticipated on the campus has made it inadvisable for the fraternities to reorganize as living groups until next year, they plan this fall to pledge a limited number of men who will be the nucleus undergraduate membership which will handle the affairs of the fraternities as they reorganize.

One night during the first week of school has been set aside for each fraternity to conduct whatever rushing program it may see fit. The rushing will be conducted by the alumni of the fraternities residing in the Salem area.

Kappa Gamma Rho rushing is scheduled for the night of October 29; Sigma Tau, for the night of October 31; and Alpha Psi Delta, for the night of November 1.

Though the fraternities will not be living in their own houses this year, they plan to hold weekly meetings and take an active part in the athletic and social life of the campus.

Recognition of Hazards is Big Safety Problem

"The average driver will avoid accident when specific hazards are called to his attention."

That statement, according to Robert S. Farrell, jr., state chairman for the Oregon Safety Week program, Oct. 22-28, is one of the principles upon which accident prevention activities are founded.

"Obviously, no driver deliberately gets himself into an accident," Farrell explained, "but all too frequently, drivers are involved in accidents as a result of failure to understand the nature of certain hazards. Once he is consciously aware of them, he is inclined to take the necessary steps to avoid them."

On this premise, accident prevention agencies in every field of safety, home, farm, industry, school and traffic, are concentrating their activities on calling attention to the many accident hazards in every day life this week.

"A campaign of one week's duration is of no consequence unless it is a special part of a continuing program," the state safety week chairman said. "Safety Week in Oregon, therefore, is merely the vehicle by which safety agencies which conduct year-around programs obtain special emphasis on certain points of their programs."

sometimes "it's processing"

IN this new, rich country nature lavishly produced furs, fish, and forests. From them have been built fortunes. This was in the pioneering stage. Now we discover manufacturing as a primary source of jobs and profits. No longer are we satisfied to produce merely the raw materials and ship them away. We are beginning to learn of the enormous commercial possibilities of developing our products to their highest form of usefulness. By taking our raw products from farms, forests, mines, oceans and streams and making them into finished products ready for consumption, we find that the wealth added by manufacture often exceeds the values of the raw products as primarily produced.

With its marvelous climate and its abundant low cost electric power, Oregon is undergoing a development in manufacturing which will do much to build a new measure of added prosperity. As in the past, Oregon's industry is developing with the help of pioneering electric utility companies. Let us look to manufacturing as one of the great new "fronts" in the Pacific Northwest's future.
