ever, as Osborn took good care of the line smashing for the Northerners once he got going. Leslie was hit equally hard by an ankle injury to Bill Sproule which kept the star Missionary back sidelined. The big difference came when Bob Keuscher's clan could find no one as a suitable replacement for Sproule to match Osborn.

Leslie, fired up and ready to go while the Pioneers fizzled and fumbled, played almost the entire first period deep in Parrish territory, but didn't have the necessary zip to score. Parrish snapped up in the second canto, but neither side did much more than punt back and forth near midfield.

The Pioneers opened the second half with a rush and drove 89 yards to score. The Leslie backbreaker in this series came when Loren Spence, on a bewhiskered statue of liberty play, took the ball from Ed Baker and rambled 28 yards around his right end to the Leslie 22. Osborn then teamed with Bruce Barker to smash to the four on line plays. On fourth down and four yards out, Osborn thudded through his own right tackle for the score. He tried to convert the same way, but was stopped.

Parrish intercepted a Leslie pass on the Missionary 24 in the fourth period to open another drive. Leslie halted it momentarily by recovering Baker's fumble, but almost immediately fumbled the ball right back to Parrish on the 22. Osborn and Barker rammed to the eight in three plays. Leslie, led by her big tackle, Clayton Orsborn, rose up to stymie the thrust for three plays, but on fourth down Parrish's Osborn found a gaping hole at his right tackle post again and crashed across practically unmolested. The same hole was there when he tried the conversion.

The favored Northerners had an expected bulge in the statistics, but it was mostly gained in the second half. Only about 1500 customers turned out for the opener, probably because of the sloppy weather.
