Something About the Stuffing for Turkey: Each Family Has Favorite

By Maxine Buren
When you start giving advice about traditional meals, you take life in hands, for what's greater feeling than what's right to serve at Thanksgiving, Christmas or other holidays.

Here we are, making suggestions about the way to make turkey stuffing, but we are merely suggesting, never dictating.

There are several types of dressing, you may prefer the moist type, or the dry kind, or any variation between the two. Seasonings differ somewhat, and the kind of moisture used also varies.

Here is a basic recipe, which may be varied to suit the taste, it is medium moist and has rather mild seasoning. It is enough for a 10-pound turkey.

COOKED POULTRY STUFFING

1/4 cup fat
1 cup chopped celery
1 cup finely diced onions
1 small loaf diced bread, crusts included

1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons poultry seasoning
Dash cayenne
Black pepper

1 cup boiling water
Melt fat in large skillet, add celery and onions and cook until clear. Use day-old bread, either white or brown; add to ingredients in skillet and toast until a golden brown. Add seasoning and boiling water, cover and let steam 5 minutes. Pack lightly in fowl to allow for expansion.

VARIATIONS

Substitute two cups hot unsweetened apple sauce or crushed

pineapple for the boiling water in duck or goose stuffing.
1 cup Olympia oysters or 1 cup peeled, boiled and chopped chestnuts, added to regular stuffing.

An old favorite with us is this cracker stuffing, especially good to put in the forward cavity of the fowl. It's a little too tasty for many as the main stuffing, but adds nice variety when used in the smaller cavity.

LEMON CRACKER STUFFING

2 quarts cracker crumbs
1 cup diced turkey fat or suet
1 cup stock
1 cup chopped parsley
Grated rind two lemons
1 1/2 teaspoon salt

Melt fat and add crumbs then mix other ingredients and pack in lightly.

Then there are glazed sweets. Some like honey as a sweetening, some like syrup, others brown sugar. Honey or syrup this year should be the most popular.

HONEYED SWEET POTATOES WITH MACE

Boil sweet potatoes in jackets until almost done. Peel while hot. Cut in 3/4 inch slices and pack in a shallow pan. Make a syrup of 2 cups honey, 2 cups hot water and stir until well mixed. Add 3 tablespoons butter, 1/2 teaspoon mace and 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel. Pour syrup over potatoes and let simmer slowly on top of the stove, turning and basting occasionally until potatoes are transparent. Sprinkle lightly with mace just before serving.
