Sportie sorties: Best dressed coach in Coast conference? Our vote goes to WSC's Phil Sorboe. The guy looked like a walking prewar Esquire ad as he paced back and forth before his Cougars at Corvallis Saturday. Quite a contrast to his mud-splattered and slimy warriors . . . Speaking of the Cougar coaches, inimitable Buck Bailey came within inches of diving headlong from the press box when the WSC's, after finally yielding a six-pointer to the Beavers in the fourth quarter, elected to kick off instead of receive. Bailey couldn't figure any strategy in giving the ball right back to a red hot team that had just scored. Neither could the rest of the coop clan. Just what Bailey meant was dang near exemplified when the OSC's took the kick and marched right down to the WSC 38 before faltering. Giving the ball to a team only seven points in arrears just isn't Easiest threehundred bucks ever made? The paired two clubs from east of the Mississippi, but never have both contestants come from the west-although four times a western team has met Tulane, or Louisiana State university, whose players could get to the sunset side of ole man river with a short walk and a nickel ferry fare.

Louisiana State, incidentally, might well bet into the Sugar Bowl again. The Bayou Tigers, beaten by Alabama and Mississippi State, only have a so-so Tulane team yet to meet.

An Alabama victory over Mississippi State would leave LSU as the southeast's second club by virtue of seven major conquestscounting Tulane a victim.

There is strong neighborhood pressure on the Sugar Bowlers to invite the State Tigers, who play a daring, open, sudden-death game that always thrills the crowd. The argument is brought forth also that LSU, beaten twice in a season that included only big-time opponents, is more desirable than St. Mary's with one spot of tarnish

Of course, if Mississippi State
