What would you think if (1) the aspiring operators of Portland's ice arena (Shipstad and Johnson, producers of the "Ice Follies") had such gents as Slats Gill, Howard Hobson and Tom Pigott giving same arena the look-see, if (2) same aspiring operators were taking rapid strides toward the molding of their arena into a miniature Madison Square Garden and if (3) the same gents had their aspiring hearts set on attracting every major indoor athletic event in Oregon to that pint-sized "Garden?" You'd think we were whacky for concocting such a potion? Think again brother.

It's pure fact-and it can be proven—that Messrs, Shipstad and Johnson are working on a remodeling job, a big one, for their ice arena. They are also working on attracting every major indoor athletic event to their proposed "Garden." And included on the list of attractions wanted most is Salem's own but unprotected baby, the state high school basketball tournament. The Oregon High Schools Activities Association is aware of this. Mr. Pigott and his ONSAA cohorts, plus basketball coaches Gill and Hobson, have ogled the possibilities of playing basketball, king-sized, in the Rose City arena. Their reactions are said to have been "suitable" after checking rafters, seating space, etc. Coast conference games are also involved in the face-lifting plans. The aspiring Portlanders are also said to have presented estimates as to how much it will cost to build a collapsible floor and hoop goals for the joint. They pledge that 6000 can be comfortably perched for any basketball game therein. Now 6000 customers is still not

Willamette Needs Angel

To date, we've heard nothing other than an architect is due to look over the state fairgrounds horse show pavilion, object giving with an estimate on how much it will cost to produce the tournament there. The guy was due two weeks ago, but hasn't been here yet to our knowledge. Sponsoring Willamette would sanction the moving of the tourney from her incapacitated gym, its birthplace, but Willamette needs an angelic person, or persons, from the outside to underwrite the shift. And that person hasn't much time to unveil himself.

The OHSAA board of control, the gents who make the prep machinery go, convene this weekend in Portland in conjunction with the Grant-Hood River state footsame gents will haul out the bewhiskered, "-and what'll we do with the state tournament this time?" There has been little choice as to what to do with it in the past-"put 'er back in Willamette's sym" has been the answer-but this time look out. Another stomping grounds, one with twice as much seating capacity, has been found. The control misters need only to remember how many hundreds were turned away from an everloaded WU gym last March to be pressed into making a move. And what with the cards stacked as they are right now, it won't take much pressing.

-And He'd Best Hurry

True, the basketball minded prep coaches and educators in the state want the tournament to remain in Salem. But Salem isn't helping herself much. Don't blame Les Sparks & Co. for it-after all, they can't build a new gym just to hold the hoop show. But they can stand a little help-say $10,000 worth-from the outside. If that help is forthcoming, and if the sponsoring WU's can lay board with proof that our fairgrounds and city in itself can step stride with the Portland "Garden" deal, then the tourney can all probability be saved, But

We've said it before and now again-if once the tourney is taken from Salem, it's good-bye for

WOODBURN, Nov. 28—Joitin' Joe Kahut, the Woodburn farm boy now in the navy who fights Lightheavy Champ Gus Losne-vitch in Portland on January 11, will open his training grind here Saturday night with an exhibi-tion scrap with Heavyweight Dave Johnson. The bout, sponsored by Woodburn's Future Farmers of America, will be held as the top event of a smoker in the high school gymnasium. -

Ten other three-round bouts, featuring boxers from the local high school, will serve as preliminaries. Kahut and Johnson will then show in their exhibition. Popular prices will prevail for the smoker.

Kahut put on an exhibition here over a year ago which was highly successful. A capacity erowd will likely watch Saturday night's card. It starts at 8

Mississippi Staters Next for Alabama

STATE COLLEGE, Miss., Nov. 28 -(A)- The Mississippi State Marcons, a good football team sidetracked all the way from glory to oblivion by a couple of fumbles, can take plenty of glitter off the Rose Bowl Saturday. To do it, they must beat mighty Alabama, the guest team in the Pasadena New Year's classic. That's a huge order for any club, and a curomy glance at the respective records would indicate that the Maroons are foolhardy to entertain the mere dream of toppling the crushing Crimson Tide. But a look behind the bare scores reveals the interesting fact that the Maroons could have been high up among the nation's wabeaten teams if they could have avoided only two of the innumerable breaks that have gone against them this

State has been beaten twice, each time by one point — 14 to 13 by Tulane and 7 to 6 by University of Mississippi. WEST POINT, N.Y., Nov. 28-(P)-Influenza felled another member of the Army squad today as the Cadets began tapering off in their preparation for the Navy game at Philadelphia Saturday. The latest victim is George (Barney) Poole, second string end, who was confired to his quarters with a temperature of 101. Both Poole and Arnold Tucker, regular Army quarterback, missed today's practice which included a 30 - minute scrimmage, last contact work for the Cadets.

In addition, Elwyn (Rip) Rowan, Doc Blanchard's No. 1understudy at fullback, received a bruised right shoulder in the closing minutes of the workout, but it was not believed serious enough to keep him out of the game. Tucker, however, was recovering satisfactorily from the light case of flu that sent him to the hospital yesterday with a temperature of 102. His fever had subsided but team physicians said he would remain in the hospital overnight. He was expected to be released tomorrow.
