Demand High, Portland Feed Grain Market

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 22 (AP)—Portland's feed grain market maintained a very strong tone this week with demand greater than supply and prices at ceilings, the department of agriculture reported today. Heavy dairy and poultry feeding operations in the northwest contributed to the demand, the department said, and in the face of short supplies mixed feed manufacturer's demands were urgent. Portland received only 20 cars of barley in the week and Seattle's receipts were also light with 15 cars. Bid prices at Portland grain exchange were posted Dec. 20 at $47.00 per ton for No. 2 western in bulk, 15-day shipment for coast delivery. Some south Idaho barley was offered here and interest was shown in California supplies, even at higher delivered prices, but they are difficult to obtain.
