Farm Chores Done From Air By New Firm

The word "ceiling" is back in civilian-English without any reference to prices or price controls today. This is emphasized by one new business now headquartering at McNary field.

As soon as conditions permit, Francis Proteau, 1580 Center st., expects to be out in his Cub plane again doing his farm "chores" For Proteau, who has a second plane in order to expand his operations here, is farming from the sky for landowners of this area.

While weather has been too wet for satisfactory pest-control dusting, he has sprinkled ammonium sulphate, a chemical fertilizer, 100 pounds to the acre over rye grass plantings, covering 20 acres in an hour. Less time is required for dusting, he said Monday.
