2 Condemned Killers Escape Washington, D.C. Death House

WASHINGTON, April 3 -(AP) A sociable card game between two condemned killers and two policemen in the capital's death house led early today to the slayers' sensational escape with the aid of a can opener.

Joseph D. Medley, convicted of the murder of one red-haired woman and implicated by police in the deaths of two others, was retaken eight hours later in a sewer pipe where he was hiding. Earl McFarland, ex-marine convicted of strangling a young girl government worker with her own snood, remained at large. A congressional investigation of the prison system here was immediately launched as legislators complained sarcastically that Washington felons have a motto: "Everybody home by An official statement issued by District of Columbia jail of-"One of the inmates closed the cell door on Officer Sanderlin and then both inmates overpowered Officer Davis. After this they locked Officer Davis in McFarland's cell. The inmates took the clothing and all keys of the officers."

Donned Uniforms Donning the uniforms, the slayers reached the roof by prying a ventilator open with a can opener. They then let themselves down 60 feet to the bed sheets. The escape took place at 5 a.m. After a morning of intensive search, in which the FBI took part, police seized Medley in a sewer near the Anacostia river. He was still wearing remnants of the policeman's uniform, bedraggled and grimy.

Police quoted him as saying: "You can't blame a guy for trying and I'm going to try I'm glad nobody was
