

Alliance Should Be With All Peoples, Not Just One, Club Told By Linfield President

The United Nations "must offer some economic alternative to conquest" and America itself must do away "with its own petty and selfish greed" if a lasting peace is to be effected, Dr. Harry Dillon, president of Linfield college, told the Kiwanis club Tuesday.

The educator, who is consultant to the United Nations' economic council under appointment of President Truman, commended the impetus which former Prime Minister Winston Churchill gave to "the need for world organization." But he added that "if America is to make alliances I should like to see an alliance made with all peoples, not just one."

Definite Policies Urged
Dr. Dillon indirectly deplored the treatment of defeated enemies, and declared "the best way to eliminate your enemies is to try to make them your friends, although I know it is a difficult thing to recognize in view of atrocities." He said he did not mean to support a "soft peace."

He cited as one great need "an honest, forthright and definite foreign policy," which he said had not been promulgated until a month and a half ago "when it was almost too late." He declared Russia held respect for "position, force and honesty," and called for public support of policies, both foreign and domestic, which would meet the needs of the times.

New Leadership Foreseen
Dr. Dillon who attended the Universities of London and Heidelberg as well as American educational institutions, and left Germany just before Nazi troops went on the march, said he recognized Bismarck's opinion that "the great German need was for vigorous and rigorous leadership," but that he believed a new group of leaders now could be trained toward ways of peace instead of war.

Regarding America's assistance to the needy in foreign lands, the college president cited evidences of all-too-meagre attempts to aid and warned: "Don't throw a dry crust on the water and expect to get back hot biscuits and honey with the tide."

State officers of the Future Farmers of America were guests of the Kiwanis club Tuesday, as was Bernice Yeary of the Marion County public health nurses who detailed the essential work of that organization.
