The Statesman's Inquiring... Reporter...

Today's question: Do you favor a combination courthouse-city hall, separate new buildings, or no new buildings?

Charles H. Huggins, 743 Stewart, insurance executive: "I certainly favor a joint city-county building for Salem. The setup is a natural. Both the city hall and the county courthouse are antiquated and obsolete. It seems feasible to put the two together and build now. It would effect a saving and insure a nice building."

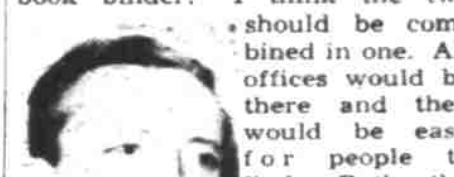

Goldie Schultz, 340 N. Church, hotel employee: "We certainly need a new courthouse, and the city hall doesn't look any too remodelable to me. If it's feasible, I think a joint courthouse and city hall would be a fine thing, both for the city of Salem and Marion county as a whole."

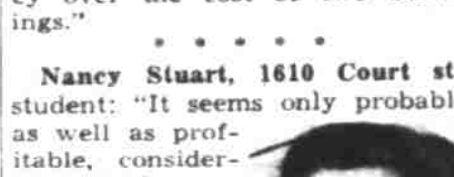

Dale Martin, 177 N. Front St., book binder: "I think the two should be combined in one. All offices would be there and they would be easy for people to find. Both the city and the county need new buildings and combining them would save money over the cost of two buildings."

Nancy Stuart, 1610 Court st., student: "It seems only probable as well as profitable, considering both the convenience and revenue aspects, that the construction of a new centralized building would be just the ticket. However, the local housing situation is the most pressing problem at hand and should be taken care of first."

Keldon Scott, 130 N. 23rd st., sign painter: "The two buildings-in-one would be good if the building were large enough for a large growth in population. Any one with city or county business would know where to go. Now, the offices are spread out around town and people don't know where to go. Building at the present courthouse site would be bad because it would be in the center of congestion."

John Pugh, secretary of the South Bend, Ind. YMCA will speak at a luncheon meeting at the YM, Tuesday noon. He is expected to speak of his YMCA work in an industrial city. The public is invited and are asked to make reservations by calling the YM.
