"What I have learned about Cancer"

Eric A. Johnston
ERIC A. JOHNSTON,
National Cancer Chairman

NO ONE—man, woman or child—is safe from cancer, but there is hope for prevention and cure of this dread disease through education, service, research made possible by the American people.

The most vital thing I have learned about cancer is that something can be done about this disease if it is our will to do so.

Thirty to 50% of the people who die of cancer in this country every year could be saved if they knew how to recognize the early symptoms of cancer and obtained proper treatment in time. But, tragically, they now die needlessly.

The other half die because we do not yet know enough about the cause of cancer.

Both these tragic situations can be remedied if we have the will to do it! A three-front attack is needed:

First—An intensive nationwide educational campaign to teach people that cancer is frequently curable if recognized and treated early enough.

Second—The most modern facilities for the treatment and care of our cancer patients must be made available to everyone, everywhere.

Third—Present medical knowledge of cancer must be extended by a comprehensive program of scientific research... as thoroughgoing as that which gave us the atomic bomb.

Yes, cancer is our "No. 1 Enemy" because it threatens not only death but long and often terrible suffering.

To attack this vital problem, the American Cancer Society, guided by the nation's outstanding scientific and business leaders, this year seeks $12,000,000 from the American people.

The attack against cancer deserves the unqualified support of every American citizen, every business organization, both large and small. Unless we do give our support, some 17,000,000 Americans now living will die of cancer—perhaps half of them needlessly. This is unthinkable in a country where the life of the individual is valued above all else.
