'King of the May'

Early returns in the Italian elections forecast the fate of King Umberto, that the previously applied label "King of the May" may prove aptly chosen by virtue of the June election throwing out the monarchy. Both in northern Italy, the home of all chirruped readiness to yield republican sentiment, and in the country around Rome the vote sovereignty to some international was adverse to royalty. Umperto may soon follow his father to join the ranks of kings without thrones, of monarchs without kingdoms.

While Italian voters evidently have turned against royalty they stopped short of communism. By the early count the socialist party was leading, with democrat-christians second and communists third. In France the communists likewise were rebuffed. the MPR party (republican moderates) taking the lead in elections for the constituent assembly, with communists second and socialists third. The MRP failed to obtain a majority however, so tainable and assuredly satisfaca coalition government will be continued.

It thus appears that republicatism gains a new chance in western Europe, that the tide has turned against communism. The effect is to consolidate the western part of the continent into ganization "of sovereign states" the political orientation of Britain and the United States as a-going. The big powers seem against orientation toward Moscow. The French assembly will proceed to write a new constitution, which will reflect this shift in voting strength.

The Roman Catholic church threw its weight against the leftists, which undoubtedly helped in the communist defeat. If its influence was exerted in behalf of the Italian royal house, inspectors to an eop around in which is not clear from the reports, evidently the people rejected every laboratory in search of posthis part of its counsel:

On the whole the voters of France and Italy showed discriminating judgment in Sunday's elections. We of the west can breathe more freely. Now the friends of the republican form of government must do a good job to justify the public's choice.

Meatless Monday

One minor strike which cannot but result in accumulating ing some new lethal weapon? III will for the strikers is that called by San Francisco butchers against the Safeway stores. The butchers' union seeks to compel all meat markets to close on Monday. Safeway concedes the fiveday week and the wage increase sought, but refuses to close its meat counters on Monday. Here the concern is not merely for Safeway's profits but for customers' necessities and convenience. Housewives should have the privilege of renewing their meat supply on Monday after the customary Sunday closing. It would seem that six-day operations would provide more jobs than fiveday operations, so union members would gain and not lose by reducing the work-week one day. It looks as though the union had just decided to have a long if not a "lost" weekend and is Frictions still would arise; and trying to force employers and the public to conform. This looks resulting wars would be devastalike an abuse of the union's bargaining power.

WASHINGTON, June 3 .- The Krug-Truman coal settlement with John Lewis followed the clever route taken on the same subject by the late President Roosevelt. During the 45-day strike, and before, Mr. Truman had his best labor mediator, an expert called in to work settlement by normal means. The function was suddenly transferred a few days before the agreement to Interior secretary Krug, friend of the president (Roosevelt gave in to Lewis formerly through Ickes who was erior secretary on the previous coal strike occamost.) The mine owners were left out of the negotistions. This was all technically proper because the pernment had seized the mines and was negotiatng a contract for itself, and the interior department les mines and mining. The effect, however, was a political settlement, in favor of Lewis, instead of a diated give-and-take.

All it meant, or even what it was worth, was mediately evident. The text intertwined itself back with previous agreements and reporters had difficulty agreeing on what was provided. Further, im- Paul Mallon portant provisions possibly might be in violation of the Case bill passed by congress the same day. Thus it was difficult or impossible to present to the public a full definite understanding about it, yet these owing conclusions are possible: Lewis won the right to tax 5 cents each ton of coal produced (he wanted 10 cents) and this will net the union $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 or more each year depending upon production which was 620,000,000 tons in 1944 and 511,000,000 in 1941. The operators are to collect this sably in the price of coal and turn it over monthly to a board of three; Lewis, the government coal mine administrator, meaning Krug of some Truman appointee, and a third man chosen by agreement between Lewis and the Truman appointee. Even after the mine operators get their mines back, they, the public or even the miners would have no say or knowledge of the handling of the fund, except as provided by these three.

May Be Used Politically That Lewis, the Truman man and their third party could lend money for political campaigns (as Lewis did formerly with UMW funds) seems perfectly possible under the text. They are trustees, and can do anything trustees can do, without any other limitation spe-

The purpose of the fund is not precisely defined. The text says it shall be disbursed to miners' dependents or survivors to make up any wage losses not otherwise already made up, through sickness, death, disability and (these are direct quotes) "other related welfare purposes to be determined by the trustees."

But there is another fund already in existence to take care of sickness, disability, "related matters" called "a medical and hospital fund". This fund is now being deducted from wages. The only thing new about it is that Lewis, the Truman appointee and the third man, are to get control of this also, although the wording suggests they intend to dispense it as they see fit' to the local unions.

How much this fund is, was not mentioned, but a question prevails as to how Lewis can spend $30,000,000 more a year for similar purposes not already cared for, and whether the welfare fund will build a huge fund like social security of the government, which the miners presumably also have for retirement and unemployment. and payment on death to relatives.

16-Day Vacation Afforded After being off work 45 days in the strike, the text directs all miners to take a 10 day vacation beginning June 29 for which they are to be paid $100 each in advance ($4,000,000 for 400,000 miners, in the midst of reconversion after the strike absorbed stocks and forced Industries to close.) The additional pay raise is about 20 per cent, and some published is figures indicated the minimum wage will be brought from $63.50 to $75.25 a week, if the miners work six days, as at present with time and a half, portal to portat, for all over 7 hours the first five days of the week and time and a half for the full sixth day. New also is the provision that miners may refuse to work the sixth day, in which case the minimum wage would be $59.25 for five days compared with $63.50 they now get for six days. If Lewis lost anything he wanted, it could only be an additional $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 a year he wanted to collect for his "welfare fund" through a 19 cents tax (royalty) on each ton of coal produced. The Lewis idea was the operators would have to make the same agreement to get their mines back.

Now I have no particular quarrel with the thesis of this proadcast, nor with its conclusion. I am feady to concede some of our own so-called sovereignty to a proper international organization. But I do think that the thesis of this broadcast is false in presenting that as a presently attory solution of the problem which confronts the world.
