Friday some were resistant. Dealings were relatively small all week

In past months, while the industrials, utilities and the market as a whole had been posting new highs, the transportation section remained more or less indifferent. It began to take heart, however, when the railway strike ended late in May and prospects brightened for rising traffic imposts to offset mounting wages and other costs.

The list had its best day of the week Thursday, with purchasing generally based on dividends, splitups, earnings, inflation psychology and the possibility of congress putting substantial brakes on price controls. In that session, with volume up to 1,150,000 shares, largest since June 5, the
